SHADOW OF RED PINCERS FALLS ACROSS TURKEY

British Fear Push to Persian Gulf

JERUSALEM, Palestine, Dec. 6—The attention of Palestinians has been diverted from their own internal strife to the red shadow lengthening over the valley of Mesopotamia and the whole region south of the Caucasus mountains.

Reports of anti-soviet riots in Istanbul, radio broadcasts from Moscow and dispatches from Baghdad and Damascus confirm the impression that Stalin's empire is on the march thru the near east. This whole region is so interdependent economically and so closely knit together religiously and socially that repercussions of the troubled situation are felt here as well as at Damascus, Beirut, and even down to Cairo.

Putting the pieces together, it looks to observers here, official and unofficial, as if for the time being the Russians have finished their immediate job in Iran and have successfully broken off the northwest corner of that country [Azerbaijan], and attached it to Russia.

Springboard to East

Reports today forecast a vaster operation starting in Iran and spreading thru Iraq into Turkey, the object of which would be to split off all territories inhabited by Armenians and Kurds and incorporate them into the soviet union. Pointing out the positions on a map, strategists pointed out that Russia then would have achieved its object of putting a pincers around Turkey—the western claw of the pincers being Bulgaria—and that the Turks thus would be forced to take a constructive view of Russian ambitions to control the Dardanelles.

At the same time new territory would be destined to be liberated into Stalin's empire to provide the Russians with a Caucasian bastion and springboard positions for threatening the Tigris and Euphrates valley and other British controled territories in the middle east. It would be an important step in the Russian push toward two goals—Iraq and Arabian oil and the warm waters of the Persian gulf.

British Action Explained

The prospect is far from pleasing to British here. Despite the strong and ever increasing forces garrisoned all the way from Ismailia on the Suez canal up to Haifa, it is doubted if the British are ready to undertake large scale operations as far north as the Caucasus.

During a recent inspection trip thru the middle east of Field Marshal Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial general staff, THE TRIBUNE learned that he is not optimistic regarding British chances of holding the first line of defense, which runs north of Damascus and Baghdad, altho it is hoped that they would be able to make a junction with the Turks if Turkey decided not to submit tamely to soviet pressure.

One result of the development of soviet expansion has been that even the dullest minds here see clearly the real purpose of the formidable preparations which the British are making thru this region—notably roads, air fields, and camp installations—and of the constant influx of fresh troops.

Expect Resistance

It also has become clear to all who were shutting their eyes to obvious facts why Foreign Secretary Bevin has adopted a stalling attitude to the problem of the Zionists and why he seems determined not to antagonize the Arabs at this moment.

THE TRIBUNE has learned that Turkey undoubtedly will resist and already important troop movements are taking place.

'Tiger' Thanks Army Judges for Fair Trial

BY ROBERT CROMIE

(Picture on page 8)

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 7 [Friday]—Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita this afternoon was sentenced to death by hanging on war criminal charges stemming from thousands of atrocities committed by troops of his command thruout the Philippines. An overflow crowd jammed the courtroom to watch the "Tiger of Malaya" hear the verdict.

Yamashita heard the verdict without emotion. Before the military commission announced the verdict he thanked "the United States of America" for assigning him brilliant and conscientious lawyers and swore by "my creator" that he was innocent.

"My conscience is clear. I want to thank the commission for a fair trial," he said.

Take Secret Ballot

Maj. Gen. R. B. Reynolds, the commission president, read the verdict in a sober voice after summoning Yamashita, his chief counsel, and interpreter to stand before the bench. After summing up the charge and the evidence presented Reynolds concluded:

"Accordingly upon a secret written ballot, two-thirds or more of the members concurring, the commission finds you guilty as charged and sentences you to death by hanging."

Yamashita, whose back was to the courtroom, showed by no visible sign what he must have been feeling as the sentence was translated to him. He went quietly under guard from the courtroom as the commission members sat quietly and grave faced, at least one of them perspiring.

Then Reynolds announced that since the commission's task was done it was adjourned sine die. There was no outburst of any kind in the packed courtroom.

Ironically, as Yamashita was being sentenced there were circulating in the courtroom copies of today's Navy News, service paper, carrying a story on the impromptu poll conducted among 12 newspaper men yesterday in which it was agreed that Yamashita had not been proved sufficiently guilty to warrant hanging.

Yamashita's Statement

Here is Yamashita's statement read by his interpreter to the commission just before he was sentenced:

"In my capacity as commander in chief of the Japanese 14th area army I met and fought here in the Philippines numerically superior and qualitatively superior armed forces of the United States. Thruout this engagement I have endeavored to fulfill to the best of my ability the requirements of my position and have done my best to conduct myself at all times in accordance with the principles of fairness and justice.

"I have been arraigned and tried before this honorable commission as a war criminal. I wish to state that I stand here today with the same clear conscience as on the first day of my arraignment, and I swear before my creator that I am innocent of the charges made against me.

"With reference to the trial itself, I wish to take this opportunity

DANES REPORT REDS SEND MORE TROOPS TO BORNHOLM ISLE

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 6—During the last two months the strength of the soviet garrison on the Danish island of Bornholm has been increased about 50 per cent, responsible sources reported today.

Britain and the United States are winding up their military activities here according to schedule.

The Russians entered Bornholm after an aerial bombing attack there five days following the German collapse. They established a garrison which in September was estimated at about 4,000 troops. However, it is reliably reported that since September new units have been sent to the Baltic island and the present garrison is estimated at 6,000.

Former Premier Vilhelm Buhl visited Bornholm six weeks ago and made a formal speech in which he told the Russians Denmark had been glad to act as host to the great Red army, but was in position now to take care of her own affairs, hinting openly that now would be a good time for the Russians to leave. Gen. Jakusheff said he would forward Buhl's remarks to Moscow. Since then the garrison has been increased.

Pauley Urges U. S. to Strip Jap Industry

TOKYO, Dec. 7 (AP)—Edwin W. Pauley, United States reparations commissioner, recommended today that Japan be stripped of all assets abroad, virtually all chemical, steel, and shipbuilding capacity, and half her electric power and machine tool industries.

Edwin W. Pauley

Pauley said in a formal statement that he was recommending this course to President Truman to destroy any possibility of Japan ever waging war again and to reimburse the countries she victimized.

"Equipment built up in Japan during the past generation consisted of plants for the purpose of waging wars of aggression," Pauley said, "and despite all war time destruction, there still is more than twice as much in usable condition as when Japan started her aggressive course in Manchuria 14 years ago. That surplus must be taken out."

Send Gold to United States

These industrial facilities would be shipped to other countries, along with all Japanese capacity for producing many specified light metals, while all the nation's gold and precious metals would be sent to the San Francisco mint to be held pending decision on its disposal.

Equipment used solely for making arms and ammunition will be destroyed, Pauley stated.

Demilitarization of Japan by removal of her surplus production potential, Pauley explained, "will not mean complete deindustrialization." On the contrary, he asserted, its removal, especially to other Asiatic countries, "will help to raise their living standards without depressing the standards of Japan—since only excess capacities are in question."

Will Start Removals Soon

As an initial step in his plan to remove all war production potentialities, Pauley said he was recommending to Truman an interim program of removals to be started as soon as shipments can be determined.

His program would reduce Japanese steel production from more than 11 million annual tons to 2½ million, estimated to be ample for civilian needs; would remove everything from 20 shipyards except what is necessary for the repair of shipping essential to the occupation; and would cut light metal industries down to processing of scrap already available.

WIFE OF EX-CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES IS DEAD IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, 81, wife of former Chief Justice Hughes, died tonight at their home here.

Mrs. Charles E. Hughes

Mrs. Hughes was Miss Antoinette Carter daughter of the senior partner of the law firm with which Hughes was associated as a young lawyer.

She was born in Milwaukee, Wis., and studied at Wells college, Aurora, N. Y., and at Wellesley college.

$1,000 RANSOM DEMANDED FOR KIDNAPED BABY

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 6 (AP)—An unidentified woman tonight demanded "more than $1,000" ransom for the 6 month old kidnaped son of a navy man, who never has seen the child.

Mrs. James J. Carlan, mother of the child taken from his carriage a week ago Wednesday, received the call late this afternoon.

Investigation led police to a Boston restaurant, where a woman employe told them she had overheard a man and a woman talking "about the Carlan case" and that the woman had then gone into a phone booth.

Mrs. Carlan, wife of a navy machinist mate, told her caller she "didn't have that much money, but might be able to get it together." The woman then answered, "Well, I'll call you again, probably tomorrow."

Kills Foreman and Himself in Railway Shop

Thomas Cantwell, 40, of 9641 Marion av., Columbus Manor, an electrician in the Rock Island railroad shops at 4929 Wentworth av., where he had been employed for 18 years, yesterday fatally shot his foreman, John G. Eberler, 61, and then killed himself.

Thomas Cantwell

The double shooting occurred before a dozen union members and supervisory employes who were attending a grievance conference in the general foreman's office.

Cantwell, police learned, had passed thru an outer office, where several women employes were at work, and burst into the inner office. Detective William Henegan said Eberler was talking to the group.

Wishes He'd Bullet for Another

Cantwell interrupted:

"What have you got against me?"

Eberler replied: "Why, nothing in particular . . ."

His words were cut short as Cantwell jerked a .32 caliber revolver from his pocket and sent two slugs into his foreman's head.

Turning to another shop executive, Cantwell said:

"It's lucky for you there's only one bullet left, or you'd get one too!" Cantwell then fired a shot into his own right temple.

Cantwell's wound was almost instantly fatal. Eberler was taken to Evangelical hospital, where he died several hours later. His wife, Carrie, 54, sobbed that Eberler had been with the railroad for 45 years and was to retire on pension next month. The Eberler home is at 2206 W. 107th pl.

Rebuked by Eberler

The conference had been requested of the various shop foremen by the executive board of local 651 of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers [AFL], of which Cantwell was a member.

The meeting had not been called to discuss Cantwell's alleged irregularities at work, as he is believed by shop officials to have supposed, but to consider another matter.

Cantwell, however, had been reprimanded by Eberler several days ago for absenteeism and alleged drunkenness and had been ordered to report at the shop today.

G. M. Tenders a 13½c Raise; CIO Spurns It

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 6 [Special]—The first day of resumed negotiations to settle the 16 day old General Motors strike tonight produced a company offer of a wage increase of 13½ cents an hour and an immediate rejection by the CIO United Automobile Workers.

The company's proposal was in effect a reinstatement of its previous offer of a 10 per cent raise which had been rejected before the strike by the union, which is demanding a 30 per cent increase.

"The strike continues with no change in status," Walter Reuther, UAW vice president, told a press conference after the meeting between G. M. and UAW officials adjourned. Representatives of both sides said another negotiation session would be held tomorrow, however.

Company's Recent Comment

In the absence of a company analysis of the rephrased offer, it was compared with the recent comment of G. M. President Charles E. Wilson that he felt the strikers should be brought back to their jobs at an increase amounting to less than the 10 per cent offer the company had made to avoid the strike.

Reuther, however, claimed a victory to some extent, insisting that it represented an increase of more than 10 per cent on the basis of the union's contention that the average hourly wage rate of G. M. union workers is about $1.13 rather than $1.30, as the company claims.

Nevertheless, optimism regarding a settlement remained high because it was the first time since the walkout affecting 213,000 workers began more than two weeks ago that the company and the union had sat down together in conference. They met privately in a board room of the General Motors administration building.

"Basis of Arithmetic"

Reuther said 90 per cent of the time spent in the meeting was devoted to an attempt to persuade the company to "talk economics." He added: "We still insist that the strike be settled on a basis of arithmetic, and the company still refused to consider arithmetic and its ability to pay."

"I told the corporation," said R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW, "it was my opinion the proffered wage increase was inadequate. The strike will continue until such time as an agreement has been made on a satisfactory basis. The corporation refused to enter into a discussion of profits, costs of materials, and other factors."

Meantime, a citizens' committee invited by the UAW to examine the record of its negotiations with G. M. reported the opinion it was "not too late," for a voluntary settlement to be reached in place of federal intervention.

Cool to Truman Plan

The union denounced President Truman's labor peace legislation proposal to congress and his intention to name a fact finding body to intervene in the dispute, while the company, cool toward Mr. Truman's proposals, expressed hope the strike could be settled without such action.

The corporation made no comment on the report of the committee, which acted unofficially. Gen-

OPPOSITION COMES FAST; CONGRESS STORM BREWS

M'LORD TOASTS LOAN AT SECRET COCKTAIL PARTY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6—The British delegation which successfully negotiated a 4 billion 400 million dollar loan from the United States government tonight celebrated with a cocktail and dinner party at which John Maynard Keynes, British financial expert, was host.

No Americans attended the gathering, which was highly secret and held in a private dining room of the Statler hotel here. It was attended by Keynes, who, with British Ambassador Halifax, headed the British "hat in hand" delegation which met with American financial officials for several weeks arranging the loan.

A reporter saw 25 Britons, including representatives of the British foreign office and exchequer [treasury], and women attached to British agencies in Washington, enter the dining room. A neat row of black homburgs rested in a check room.

Keynes arrived for the party, for which he reportedly picked up the check, after his guests. Halifax did not appear.

The hotel outdid itself in providing numerous waiters and bus boys, headed by a waiter captain who obsequiously greeted Keynes with a deep bow and "Good evening, m'lord."

Split 8 to 8 Over Site for World Capital

BY WILLIAM FULTON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 6—In the scrap of Europe versus the United States the united nations preparatory commission tonight wound up in a deadlock over the selection of a permanent home for the new world organization. The delegations were split over the question of whether to put themselves on record or to ballot secretly.

The key to the log jam was a secret voting proposal made by the Canadian delegation. The Canadians are embarrassed over having to express themselves for their big neighbor to the south. The British are demanding that the united nations settle somewhere in Europe.

Score Is Eight to Eight

The score stood at eight nations to eight when the chairman, Dr. R. E. MacEachen, Uruguayan ambassador to London, adjourned the session of the special committee representing all 51 united nations.

The delegations, which opposed the Canadian proposition and are regarded as on the side of the United States, included the United States, Russia, Brazil, China, Cuba, Mexico, Yugoslavia, and Australia. Favoring the secret ballot were Canada, Egypt, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Greece, Belgium, and France.

See South American Split

The strategy behind the secret ballot idea is that several South American countries are believed ready to break away from the United States if they do not have to register their votes publicly. When the wrangle over procedure promised to go on all night, white haired Dmitry Zakhardovich Manuilsky, the Ukrainian delegate, who looks like Santa Claus, gained the floor.

"I move we adjourn," he said. "This is all a matter of procedure, and I once attended a disarmament conference where they spent 21 days arguing procedure."

Adlai Stevenson, acting American delegate, said the United States wanted to get the voting over as soon as possible so that the united nations would not "go wandering around homeless the first year of its existence."

The delegates will resume the discussion tomorrow.

Plan Would Supply Fund of Over 4 Billions

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—The Truman administration agreed today to grant Britain a $4,400,000,000 credit in return for British steps to promote world trade—and battle lines immediately formed in congress.

The British promised to carry out a broad program of commercial and financial reforms if congress approved the credits.

The "if" may be a big one. Even before the official announcement was released at 4:30 p. m. Chicago time some congressmen were on their feet in both chambers with objections.

"Too Damned Much"

In the house Rep. Celler [D., N. Y.] shouted that the loan "will promote too damned much socialism at home and too damned much imperialism abroad."

In the senate Sen. Moore [R., Okla.] demanded that the balance of a Reconstruction Finance corporation loan made in 1941 be liquidated by the British before new credits are given.

The exact form in which congress will be asked to approve the loan has not been decided, officials said. But efforts are being made to reach a decision within the next few days and some authorities thought President Truman would send a message to congress.

Other Countries, Too

As soon as the British loan is out of the way, the administration is expected to go to work on requests from other countries. Russia once informally suggested a $6,000,000,000 loan but has made no formal request. France and China have talked in terms of billions to meet their needs.

The agreements were completed at a brief ceremony in the office of State Secretary Byrnes. Treasury Secretary Vinson signed for the United States and Ambassador Halifax for Britain. Halifax and Byrnes also initialed agreements for organizing world trade on a free trade basis at an international conference to be held next spring or summer.

The Main Points

The United States agrees to lend Britain $3,750,000,000 as soon as it can be put thru congress to finance Britain's reconversion to peace. The British will repay neither principal nor interest for five years. In 1951 they would begin repayments at 2 per cent interest over a 50 year period.

On the same terms they would have about $650,000,000 with which to pay the United States for goods they received under lend-lease before and after V-J day, which have not already been wiped off the books. The United States furnished Britain approximately $29,000,000,000 of lend-lease, most of which has been written off, and received from the British $4,000,000,000 by reverse lend-lease.

Repayment by Year 2001

The principal and interest payments on the $650,000,000 are to be on the same terms as on the $3,750,000,000, so that in effect the British are obtaining a credit of $4,400,000,000. The money actually remains in the United States for them to draw upon as they want it. The terms mean that they must repay it by the year 2001, returning to the United States in cash approximately $7,000,000,000.

The British agreed that within one year they would wipe out the entire dollar pool set up in war time to give Britain absolute control over dollars flowing into the middle east, India, and other empire regions whose currency was based on the pound sterling. American business men have been critical of this dollar pool on the ground

BATTLE IS ON OVER BIG LOAN TO THE BRITISH

Reducing Other Debts

The British also agreed to begin negotiations with empire countries, particularly India and the middle east, for a reduction in the $16,000,000,000 debt which Britain owes them. The American negotiators, Vinson and Assistant State Secretary William L. Clayton, insisted this debt, piled up during the war, had to be cut very substantially if Britain's economic position were to be sound.

Then the British further agreed to support American proposals for removal or reduction of barriers to international trade. The British had argued that unless they got the loan they would not be able to promote world trade outside the empire and would in effect be forced into economic isolationism.

Transfer of Sterling

The British also agreed that, when requested by the United States from time to time prior to Dec. 31, 1951, they will transfer, in cash, pounds sterling to an aggregate dollar value not in excess of $50,000,000, at the exchange rates prevailing at the times of transfer, to be credited on the debt.

The United States will use these pounds sterling to acquire land or to acquire or construct buildings in British territories for the use of the United States, and for "carrying out educational programs in accordance with agreements to be concluded between the two governments."

Statement by Halifax

Halifax said at the signing that the coöperation of Britain and the United States "has not ended with the end of the war."

A high British official who spoke quite frankly behind a cloak of anonymity said the negotiations were "not too bad, altho we didn't get as much as we wanted."

ATTLEE ON LOAN

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee told commons tonight that the British government was willing to reduce or eliminate empire preferences provided there was "adequate compensation" in the form of reduced tariffs and general improvement of world trading conditions.

Addressing the house on the terms of the $4,400,000,000 loan to Britain by the United States, the prime minister emphasized "points to be noted," including the "question of tariff preference." This, he said, "is of especial interest and importance to the British commonwealth and empire."

"By Common Consent"

"The American document," Attlee said, "sets forth the procedure to be followed by common consent in considering in context a general lowering of tariffs and other trade barriers, and what contributions can be made from our side by way of reduction or elimination of preferences.

"We are ready to agree that the existing system of preferences within the British commonwealth and empire will be contracted, provided there is adequate compensation in the form of improvement in trading conditions between the commonwealth and empire countries and the rest of the world."

A "Fundamental Fact"

The document, Attlee said, recognizes this fundamental fact: That "it is essential to clear the obstacles to our exports of manufactured goods without abandoning the right to control our imports, so long as this is essential to our balance of international trade."

Attlee said that in negotiations for reduction of tariffs the "parties concerned will not refuse to discuss modification of particular preferences on the ground these are subject of prior commitments."

"On the contrary," he asserted, "all margins of preference will be regarded as open to negotiation."

Commenting on the loan, Harry Pollitt, general secretary of the Communist party in Britain, said it was a "terribly hard bargain" and that Britain would have found a "better response" if she had appealed to Russia.

BRITAIN STILL OWES 6 BILLION FROM LAST WAR

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—Aside from any new loans, Britain still owes about $6,400,000,000 to the United States on its World War I. debt. This figure was supplied by the treasury today in reply to a reporter's question.

The original loans, made both before and after the 1918 armistice, totaled only $4,277,000,000. Accumulating interest has brought the debt to $6,400,000,000 despite the fact that Britain paid more than $2,000,000,000 before ceasing payments in 1933. In fact, interest is still accumulating and the debt rises every year.

The new financial agreement announced today does not cancel the World War I. debt.

Make British Liquidate Old RFC Loan, Senate Is Urged

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6—Calling attention to the $4,400,000,000 loan negotiated with Great Britain, Sen. Moore [R., Okla.] demanded in the senate today that terms of the loans include disposal of $775,000,000 in American securities owned by the British government and liquidation of the $425,000,000 loan made in 1941 to the British by the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Sen. Moore

Moore read into the senate record lists of stocks and securities of 83 large representative American companies and 66 unlisted stocks and other securities, in many of which he said the British government was a substantial or controlling owner.

Huge Market Value

Securities held by the RFC as collateral for the 1941 loan have a current market value of $775,000,000, Moore said. The loan balance is $242,925,058, giving Britain a dollar equity in the securities of more than half a billion dollars.

Moore said that large concentrated ownership of voting shares, such as the British government holdings, in many cases is the balance of power that represents actual corporate control. He added that "industry recognizes these possibilities and justifiably is disturbed by this encroachment of government ownership."

Asks a Question

"No one would condone the ownership of these securities by the government of the United States. Why, then, shouldn't we take whatever legitimate steps at our command to divest the British government of such ownership?" Moore asked.

"Let us be realistic enough to understand that the British people have chosen national socialism as their form of government. They are at the moment engaged in the nationalization of the British financial and industrial systems. The ownership of these American securities by the British government is wholly in line with a socialistic philosophy."

OPPOSE FOREIGN LOANS TILL VETS GET 10 BILLIONS

North Shore post, American Legion, last night telegraphed President Truman that its 800 members oppose his proposal to lend money to foreign governments, with or without interest, unless a 10 billion dollar fund is first earmarked for rehabilitation of American war veterans.

The message, signed by Commander Paul L. Walgren, asserted it was "the sacred duty and obligation of the country to be just to veterans before being generous with treasury funds" in making the proposed huge loans to Britain and other countries.

The post assailed noninterest loans especially in view of the interest veterans are obliged to pay on loans obtained under the GI bill of rights. The post advocated a five year exemption for veterans of World War II. from income tax payments on wages and earnings up to $3,000 a year.

HURLEY BRANDS DEAN ACHESON CHIEF SCHEMER

Says He Upset U. S. Policy in Iran

BY WILLIAM MOORE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6—Names of higher-ups in state department feuds and intrigue began coming out today when Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley accused Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson of wrecking the American foreign policy in the middle east.

Dean Acheson

Hurley boomed out Acheson's name after two days of reluctance to designate the top state department officials indirectly accused of "defeating" American policy in China while Hurley was special ambassador there.

Insiders said the manner in which the silver haired former ambassador previously had tried to protect Acheson lends credence to stories that Acheson is the real obstructing power of which Hurley has been complaining since his resignation Nov. 27.

Clashes with 2 Senators

Hurley's charge against Acheson was only one of the fantastic events of the second session of the senate foreign relations committee's stormy investigation of the charges Hurley made when he quit. Spectators who braved the glare of newsreel floodlights heard Hurley in violent verbal clashes with Sen. Connally [D., Tex.], committee chairman, and Sen. Tunnell [D., Del.].

Other major developments were:

1. State Secretary Byrnes was asked to testify tomorrow, when he is expected to defend his department and answer questions raised by the hearing.

2. Sen. Bridges [R., N. H.] hinted that Gen. Marshall, Hurley's successor, has been instructed to get concessions from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to the armed Chinese Communists.

Plagued by Burocracy

3. Hurley said he was plagued in China by 12 rival government agencies while he was being betrayed by his own embassy staff. Among the 12 were the office of war information, the office of strategic services, the foreign economic administration, and the office of psychological warfare.

4. Knowledge of a half billion dollar loan to China was kept from Hurley until he was ordered as ambassador to tell the Chinese how to spend the money.

5. Over protests by Sen. Connally, Hurley said the United States "backed into" the Japanese war while supplying Japan with scrap iron and steel when Americans knew they must fight Japan.

Iran Policy "Destroyed"

Connally led the warrior-diplomat thru a list of admissions that the state department had upheld him in many lands. When the committee chairman mentioned Iran and asked if Hurley had met interference there, Hurley roared:

"Yes sir! Most decidedly and effectively. That interference destroyed American policy in Iran."

"Who did it?" asked Connally.

"It was done in the state department here," Hurley responded.

"You have an idea some one in the state department interfered?" Connally inquired.

"I don't have an idea." Hurley retorted. "I know."

"You said a moment ago you believed," Connally challenged.

"All right, sir," Hurley shot back. "You're right and I'm wrong. Do you want to testify or do you want me to?"

But Connally persisted in demanding the name, which nobody expected Hurley to give, despite the fact that his previous protection of high officials had enabled administration spokesmen to discredit his testimony.

"All right!" Hurley suddenly snapped. "Dean Acheson."

[Acheson is not to be confused with George Atcheson Jr., the state department official Hurley accused yesterday of going behind his back to seek lend-lease arms for the Chinese Communists, and getting promoted to be Hurley's superior in reward.]

Connally Storms

In the excitement Connally went on. He pursued Hurley with questions as to what Acheson did, altho Hurley said Acheson's actions would be explained by a document which Hurley thought "you won't want in the record."

"You don't think any such thing!" Connally stormed.

"All right," Hurley exclaimed. "In she goes, my friend. In she goes."

Hurley then began reading a photostat copy of the Iran declaration, signed at Tehran by the late President Roosevelt, former Prime Minister Churchill, and Dictator Stalin.

Hurley presented the document as one he prepared at Mr. Roosevelt's direction. The full text had never been made public, he said, altho he accused the state department of letting "a garbled version leak out."

The document pledged the Americans, British, and Russians to work for the welfare of Iran, where revolution is now flaring, because, the Iranians say, the Russians will not withdraw.

Hurley did not explain why the contents of the declaration might prove embarrassing and examination of the document did not reveal this. But subsequent remarks indicated that Hurley objects to the scrapping of the Atlantic Charter in the middle east.

Grant Offers to Testify

Bridges explained that Hugh G. Grant, former American minister to Albania, wished to testify on this subject, and Hurley said he had also received an offer to testify from Grant.

Hurley was praising his successor, Gen. Marshall, when Bridges astounded the crowd by asking:

"Will you be surprised if informed that he has been given a new directive to tell Chiang Kai-Shek that concessions must be made to the Chinese Communists and that American aid and credit will be held up unless this action is taken?"

Hurley told the story of competing government agencies and the Chinese loan when Bridges asked the ex-ambassador to explain a charge that American foreign policy is "hydra-headed."

"In China," Hurley answered, "we had the state department embassy. We had the better paid, better housed OWI. We had the large staff of FEA, and the OSS and office of psychological warfare. At one time the United States had 13 separate agencies in China, conducting our foreign relations.

"When a loan [later given as half a billion dollars] was made—after it was made—I received a telegram that it was approved by so-and-so and so-and-so and was told to suggest to the government of China how the money was to be used."

Guiding Light

Rear view of new three color guiding light for planes in landing. Seven lenses break up the light, which is visible four to five miles.

Development of a small but powerful projector that will create a path of light above an airport at the correct angle of approach for a landing plane was announced yesterday by Westinghouse Electric corporation. The device, known as an approach angle indicator, can be used alone or in conjunction with radar and is equally efficient in daylight and at night, said Westinghouse engineers.

The indicator, using only a 100 watt bulb, throws three wedges of light, the lower one red, the center green, and the top amber. The pilot maneuvers his plane into the green pathway and follows it to the ground. Glare is eliminated by having the light flash 40 times a minute. The company said the beams would penetrate medium heavy fog and would give a clear signal under any condition where contact lights are of use.

REDS 'IMPRESS' POLES WITH A MODEL STORE

(This is the sixth chapter of a story on how the people of Poland are living and what they are thinking. The author is a Chicagoan. Fictitious names are used for all Poles mentioned in this story to protect them.)

BY ROBERT E. DAVIS
[First Lieutenant, Army of the United States, Retired]
As Told to Carl Wiegman
[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

While the Russian dictatorship in Lublin was harsh, the Reds made one gesture designed to impress the Poles with the glory of communism. They set up a model store and offered for sale many luxury products like caviar, lemons, oranges, and canned fish at prices far beyond the reach of most Lublin citizens.

The store was advertised as an example of the wonderful living conditions in soviet Russia. As propaganda, the model store was a flop. The Poles laughed at it, saying: "We had better stores than this when we were a free nation, and then we could afford to buy the goods."

Shortly before I left Lublin the store was closed and the goods packed for shipment to Warsaw. Then all the Poles realized the store was only a traveling exhibit.

Two Kinds of Markets

There were two kinds of food markets in Lublin, one controled by the government, where the food was rationed, and the other a free or black market, which was governed by the law of supply and demand.

At the government market, a loaf of bread cost 40 zlotys. [Prior to the war, a zloty was worth about 19 cents.] On the black market, a loaf of bread cost 80 zlotys.

Wages of Polish workers ranged from a few hundred to 1,000 zlotys a month. Enlisted men in the Polish army fighting with the Russians received less than 100 zlotys a month.

Meets Polish Prince

Luckily for me, two Polish families gave me food and shelter. After I sold my souvenir plates and arranged to eat in the home of the merchant, I had another piece of good fortune, thanks to my friend, Flight Officer Anderson of the R. C. A. F.

Anderson had found a billet in the home of a Polish judge and took me there in the hope that the family could find a place for me. The judge's wife, a gracious lady who spoke English and French, led me to a house near-by and introduced me to Prince Stanislaw Buzek.

Prince Buzek, a tall, handsome man of about 40, had been a captain in the Polish navy and helped direct the last gallant fight at the naval base of Gdynia. The Germans held him in a prison camp until the Russians overran the camp, when he escaped and returned to his wife and son, 11, in Lublin.

Gets to Sleep on Couch

The prince's wife showed me a little couch where I could sleep, apologizing for the inadequacy of the accommodations. I hastened to tell her they were the best accommodations I had seen since my capture, except those at the Grand hotel in Lodz.

Lunch at the prince's house consisted of macaroni flavored with poppy seeds, tea, and cookies. Afterward, the prince showed me the way to the home of the merchant who had promised to give me dinner. The merchant and his wife lived in a well furnished apartment, the finest home I had seen in Poland. They could not speak English but the food they served spoke eloquently.

First came meat dumplings, very good; then a glass of vodka, and next a bowl of red soup containing potatoes and bacon. After that came roast beef—real roast beef. Cookies and tea were served for dessert. I had to leave early to be off the streets before dark, and when I said good-by my host told me to return at 2 p. m. the next day.

Back in the prince's home, we had a merry evening playing bridge. We got along famously, altho their scoring system was different from ours.

Asks About American Aid

I could see the prince's wife was worried about matters more important than the bridge game. She told me privately she lived in dread that the Russians would seize her husband and son. The prince's uncle already had been arrested by the Russian N. K. V. D. [secret police] and had vanished, she said.

We talked about the war, and the prince asked me the old question: "What will America and Britain do for Poland?" I replied that I thought America could do nothing, and pointed out that if another war came, Poland again would be a battleground.

Because of the prince's social position and former wealth, I discounted his opinions on Russia, but when he spoke as a Polish patriot, he used almost the same words as those expressed to me by Polish peasants and working class people. I never heard a word about pan-Slavism. The Poles want to be free.

Tell Low Down on Russians

The next day I appeared promptly for dinner at the merchant's home. There were two other guests, officers in the Polish army who could speak English, and this made it possible for me to tell my appreciation for the dinner, which was wonderful. Starting with caviar and vodka, there was a delicious soup, roast pork, tea, and cakes.

The dinner was served by a rotund little maid who seemed to enjoy seeing me eat, for she heaped the food on my plate.

After dinner, the Polish officers told me what they thought of the Russians, which was not complimentary. They said all the high officers of the Polish army were Russians; no Pole could rise higher than a major. Both officers said they had received no army pay for four months.

I asked them why the Red army treated liberated Americans so badly.

Value Only Power

"The Russians are barbarians," they said. "They value nothing but power. They are treating you as they treat anybody who is helpless. In Russia the government officials and army officers get everything; the people nothing. The officials and officers are a new upper class, as despotic as the old aristocracy.

"We Poles realized our economic system was not perfect before the war, but we were a free nation and our standard of living was higher than the Russians' standard. Now we are being dragged down to their level."

While I enjoyed the good food at the merchant's home, I felt guilty about eating it. I couldn't forget that many other less fortunate American soldiers in Lublin were getting starvation rations.

A BILLION MORE FOR UNRRA; LONE PROTEST FAILS

Short Finds It 'Unpopular' to Plead U. S. Case

BY WILLIAM STRAND
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6—A lone voice was raised in the house today in behalf of America, amid debate on legislation authorizing a new expenditure of 1 billion 235 million dollars for war relief under the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration.

Rep. Short

Taking the floor after scores of his colleagues had spoken of the needs of the peoples of other lands and of this nation's obligation to assume the burden of caring for them, Rep. Short [R., Mo.] administered a stirring rebuke to those in and out of congress whom he termed professional uplifters and world reformers.

He charged that they are forever concerned with the woes of the rest of the world while ignoring the ills of their own country and their own people.

Jewels Could Buy Food

"As long as I know they have the crown jewels in London and Moscow," Short thundered, "I will never vote a dollar to take butter and bacon and corn pone out of the mouths of my people. And I have seen those jewels. They are brilliant and would bring a sum on the American market today sufficient to run any government for a while."

The measure, which doubles the original United States contribution to UNRRA and raises it to 2 billions 700 millions, later was passed, 337 to 39, and sent to the senate. Many house members supported it with obvious reluctance, explaining they were voting for it simply because it represents a humane gesture toward the rest of the world and is designed to bring relief to women and children of war torn lands now facing a critical winter period without sufficient clothing, food, or shelter.

Warn It's Last Time

Warnings that congress would not entertain another request for UNRRA funds were voiced repeatedly during the afternoon.

The chamber by a voice vote refused to accept an amendment requiring that American correspondents have free access to news of UNRRA activities in countries where the American funds are spent.

The chamber also adopted another proviso "requesting" the American representative on the UNRRA control committee to try to secure from the nations receiving aid details of any secret trade agreements they may have with other countries as well as the issuance of credentials to enable British representatives to move about freely in those countries.

Wording Toned Down

As originally offered, the latter amendment stated that the American representative "shall" endeavor to take these steps. But this was too strong for the supporters of the measure and the wordage was changed to make it a "request."

Despite the widespread criticism of UNRRA expenditures and charges of waste and extravagance, supporters of the bill urged its passage with little or no change. They emphasized that any requirements or conditions for the spending of the American money might delay transmission of the supplies because, they said, the provisos might not be acceptable to the other nations.

Seek to Save Indiana 'Blue Baby'

Mrs. Ray Hayden combs the hair of daughter, Janice Marie, whose heart deformity may cost her life, as Janice's brother, Danny Ray, stands by in Michigan City, Ind., home.

Raise Surgery Fund

Arrangements were being made yesterday for the removal this weekend of Janice Marie Hayden, "blue baby" of Michigan City, Ind., to Johns Hopkins University hospital in Baltimore, Md., to determine whether surgery on her deformed heart might save her life. Physicians at Michigan City have said they feared she might die before her 3d birthday next Feb. 8.

The girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hayden, 1709 E. Michigan st. They have a son, Danny, 15 months old, who is in normal health. A Michigan City newspaper received more than $500 in contributions from residents to send the family to John Hopkins university, where surgery recently has helped some "blue babies."

Janice weighs only 22 pounds and has frequent seizures resulting from the heart deformity. The condition causes insufficient oxygen to reach the lungs.

FREE CHEVALIER ON CHARGES OF AIDING GERMANS

PARIS, Dec. 6—Maurice Chevalier, whose protruding lip and faubourgian accent took him from a working suburb to the heights of Hollywood stardom, was acquitted today on charges of collaboration with the Germans. The national committee of theatrical purge gave its verdict in Chevalier's case without sanctions. The charges against Chevalier were that he toured Germany, but it was shown his tour was to French prisoners of war camps and that his alleged meeting with Hermann Goering was unsolicited.

MARSHALL SURE HAWAII COULD RESIST ATTACK

Didn't Foresee Surprise Raid, He Testifies

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6—Gen. Marshall, former army chief of staff, told the congressional Pearl Harbor investigating committee today he was certain in November, 1941, that army forces in Hawaii could successfully resist an attack by sea or air.

Gen. Marshall before committee yesterday

Marshall further testified he had not visualized a surprise Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor because he was convinced the risks involved were too great for the Japanese to attempt such an operation. Instead, he said, he expected the Japanese to move their forces "conservatively" southward toward Thailand and the Malay peninsula.

Earlier, Marshall had read into the record the minutes of a war department conference in February, 1941, in which he had warned his staff of the possibility of a Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, but at which Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, his intelligence officer, said "nothing in G-2 [intelligence] indicated any such probability."

Marshall Testifies All Day

Marshall, resplendent in his uniform as a five star general, was in the witness chair all day, calmly answering questions directed to him by Committee Counsel William D. Mitchell. Marshall, who will leave shortly for China as President Truman's personal envoy, was roundly cheered by the audience, which packed the hearing room when he strode in this morning. Movie cameras ground out the scene, brilliantly illuminated by floodlights, as he was sworn in by Sen. Barkley [D., Ky.], chairman of the investigating committee.

Mitchell asked Marshall what his estimate was, in November, 1941, of the Hawaiian department's capacity to resist an attack.

Considered It Equipped

"The military forces in Hawaii at that time were equipped more nearly up to desired standards than any other installation in the army," Marshall declared. "My impression was that the garrison was sufficiently equipped to resist a landing, meet an air attack, and protect the naval base. I felt it was equipped to meet a surprise attack on short notice."

Marshall acknowledged Gen. Short's command was not equipped to make long range reconnaissance, thus detecting attacking forces. Only 12 B-17 Flying Fortresses were in the islands, he pointed out. "Even at top production in 1943 and 1944 we never could give the Hawaiian commander what he wanted," Marshall added. "The problem could be met only by increased vigilance."

Marshall went on to say a surprise attack always involves great hazard, and results "either in triumph or catastrophe." Had the Japs met catastrophe at Pearl Harbor, losing their carrier fleet, Singapore would not have fallen, the Burma road would not have been cut, and the entire Pacific war picture would have been different, he said.

Did Not Visualize Operation

Gen. Short had the means at least to break up the Japanese attack to the point where it would have caused limited harm, Marshall said.

Referring to the fact that the army and navy knew Japanese spies were collecting and forwarding to Tokyo data on our fleet movements at Pearl Harbor in 1941, Mitchell asked if the knowledge of espionage activities affected his estimate of Japanese moves.

"It should have," Marshall admitted. "It is hard to recall my reactions at that time, but I did not visualize that specific operation [the surprise attack]. I was inclined to feel the hazard was too great and that they wouldn't risk it. I felt they would proceed conservatively to the south."

"In other words, you were 2,000 miles away," Mitchell suggested.

Out on End of Plank

"I don't mean that at all," snapped Marshall. "Regardless of the distance of Pearl Harbor, I felt the Japanese would not risk it. . . . As it was, they went out on the end of a plank."

Marshall was questioned about the brief acknowledgment sent by Short in reply to Marshall's war warning of Nov. 27, 1941. In it Short reported he had alerted his command for sabotage and mentioned no other preparations.

Marshall said he "assumed" he had seen the message, and said he could not recall that any one in the war department called his attention to the brevity of Short's reply.

Session Ends Abruptly

Today's session was abruptly ended at the usual hour of 4 o'clock by Barkley just as Marshall was starting to answer questions on his activities when the final Japanese message indicating a break in diplomatic negotiations was received the day of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Marshall had denied any knowledge of the famous "east winds rain" message reportedly sent by the Japanese as the final word to its diplomatic representatives that war with the United States had been decided on.

Mitchell then asked Marshall if he remembered the intercepted Tokyo messages to the Japanese envoys here, received early on the morning of Dec. 7, and which set 1 p. m. as the hour for delivering Japan's final word to this government.

Memo to F. D. R. Offered

"I first knew about it when I reached the war department . . ." Marshall began, when he was interrupted by Barkley's gavel.

One piece of evidence introduced today was a five paragraph document headed "Aide Memoire, Defense of Hawaii," which Marshall said he had delivered to President Roosevelt early in May, 1941. He said he did not know who wrote it, or what the occasion was for his meeting with the President.

The memorandum stated flatly "The Island of Oahu [on which Pearl Harbor is located], due to its fortification, its garrison, and its physical characteristics, is believed to be the strongest fortress in the world."

The memorandum went on to say an approaching attacking force would be under constant attack from the time it approached within 750 miles of Oahu.

Help to Britain Urged

Late in the day the committee heard another memorandum from the late President Roosevelt's secret files read in which Gen. Marshall said "Britain is reaching limit of usable manpower. We must supplement her forces."

The document, addressed to Roosevelt, was not dated, but Assistant Counsel Gerhard Gesell said it apparently was written in the summer of 1941, some months before the United States was attacked.

Marshall said in the document that a military requirement was to "prepare task forces to secure, when opportunity offers, additional bases encircling Germany." Another recommendation was: "Prepare framework for forces eventually to defeat Germany. Time is required to organize, train, and equip these."

Marginal Notes by F. D. R.

The memorandum, which bore marginal notations by Mr. Roosevelt, dealt with plans for the army ground forces as relating to "basic considerations" of national policy.

Marshall listed as primary objectives the "eventual defeat of Germany" and "curb of Japanese aggression," along with defense of the western hemisphere and preservation of the Russian-British war effort.

Marshall warned in the document that it would be "disastrous" to reduce the size of the United States army in order to send additional material to Britain and Russia. "Germany cannot be defeated," Marshall said, "by supply of munitions to friendly powers and air and naval operations alone. Large ground forces will be required."

Several Possibilities

At another point he said: "Collapse of Russia, England, offensive tactics by Japan and belligerent attitude in Latin America are possibilities. We must prepare to meet eventualities."

The former chief of staff proposed that a "build-up of air power" be rushed to the Philippines, together with small increases in modern ground army equipment and men "to restrain Japan from advance into Malaysia or eastern Siberia."

As to Hawaii, the memorandum said the expansion of naval defenses there called for strengthening army ground defenses. But, it continued: "Presence of fleet reduces threat of major attack. Reenforcements can be deferred as long as fleet remains in Pacific."

Also introduced today were complete reports on American military conversations in 1941 with the British, Dutch, and Canadians. Questioned briefly on the reports, Marshall denied any commitments for the United States to go to war on Britain's side were made at the conferences.

Aimed to Beat Nazis

Texts of the agreements reached between the United States and Great Britain, Canada, and the Netherlands, made public when Marshall took the stand, showed that war with Japan was not a primary consideration of the conferees. The report on each conference listed the defeat of Germany as its primary purpose.

The security of Luzon in the Philippines was listed as "an important subsidiary interest," because it lay on the flank of sea lanes between Japan and Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

In their assumptions on possible Japanese intentions, the Singapore conferees listed attacks on the Philippines, Hong Kong, Malaya, Burma, Thailand, Indo-China, and Borneo. All later were taken by the Japanese. No mention was made of a possible Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, altho it had long been considered a possibility by American strategists.

MORNING SESSION

BY LAURENCE BURD

Repeated efforts by Gen. Short to bolster army defenses in Hawaii in the fateful months before the attack on Pearl Harbor were disclosed at the morning session of the inquiry.

The documents, submitted in connection with Gen. Marshall's testimony, included an exchange of letters between Short and Marshall from Feb. 7, 1941, the day Short took command of the base, and Oct. 28, 1941.

In his letters to his chief of staff, Gen. Short persistently stressed the urgent need for more adequate defenses against possible "surprise air attacks." He placed particular emphasis on the need for modern aircraft detection equipment.

Appealed Eight Times

On at least eight separate occasions during this period the Hawaiian commander made specific requests for funds and material to strengthen the Pacific base.

Gen. Marshall's reply letters praised Gen. Short in several instances for being "on the job" and for the coöperation he was exercising in defense plans with Adm. Kimmel, navy commander at the base.

The Short-Marshall correspondence was included in a mass of documents placed in the record by Committee Counsel Mitchell.

Included was an exchange of messages dealing with the full scale "alert" of the army defenses at Hawaii ordered by the war department in Washington June 17, 1940.

Feared Raid in 1940

This alert, which lasted more than two months but was not participated in by the navy, was ordered because of fears that Japan was even then planning a "trans-Pacific raid" on Pearl Harbor, according to a memorandum prepared by Marshall in June, 1940.

The Marshall memo, addressed to Lt. Gen. C. D. Herron, then army commander at Hawaii, but not sent, said in part:

"You have no doubt wondered as to the alert instructions sent to you on the 17th [of June]. Briefly, the combination of information from a number of sources led to the deduction that recent Japanese-Russian agreement to compose their differences in the far east was arrived at and so timed as to permit Japan to undertake a trans-Pacific raid against Oahu, following the departure of the United States fleet from Hawaii.

Would Help Axis

"Presumably such a raid would be in the interests of Germany and Italy, to force the United States to pull the fleet back to Hawaii."

Records of correspondence and war department conferences disclosed also that the United States drafted plans in the first half of 1941 for entering and occupying Martinique and the Azores.

At a conference with War Secretary Stimson in May, 1941, Marshal said 14 B-17 Fortresses of the most modern type were being withheld

GI WHO DETECTED PEARL HARBOR RAID CALLS QUIZ 'ASININE'

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 6 (AP)—The soldier—now a civilian—who detected and vainly warned of the approach of Japanese planes to Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, said today any attempt to fix blame for that disaster "has a strong odor of the election in 1948."

The statement was made by Joseph L. Lockard, who was on duty as an army private at Pearl Harbor on the day of the attack, in an interview in which he termed "asinine" the house-senate congressional Pearl Harbor inquiry.

Lockard, 24, recently was discharged from the army with the rank of first lieutenant. He is an insurance adjuster employed by a Williamsport firm.

MARSHALL SURE HAWAII COULD RESIST ATTACK

from Hawaii and kept in the United States "in view of the current situation." Stimson asked if this hold-up would affect the impregnability of Hawaii, and Marshall replied it would not.

The committee also heard that early in 1941, when our military chiefs were concerned over inadequate defenses thruout the Pacific area, Great Britain was requesting 50,000 airplanes from this country, to be delivered in 1942.

Deficiency of Planes

Gen. Marshall told an army staff conference on Feb. 25, 1941, that he had a memorandum on the British request. The former chief of staff further noted, in the conference record made public today, that this country at that time had a "deficiency of 10,000 [planes] in organizing the 14,000 [plane] program."

At this conference, Marshall said the navy was concerned over the security of the fleet at Hawaii, and he explained that plans were underway to send 81 Curtiss-Wright pursuit planes [31 P-36's and 50 P-40's] to Pearl Harbor in March. He said there were no modern planes in the Philippines or the Panama Canal zone at that time.

[The Curtiss P-36, a radial engined, stubby plane which developed about 1,100 horse power on takeoff, was regarded as obsolete in 1941. Curtiss had produced the P-40, a faster and better armed plane with a liquid cooled engine.

[The P-36, known as the Mohawk to the British, was sold to the British and French in 1939. Tests showed it could not stand up to the Messerschmitt 109, the best German fighter, especially at high altitudes. The most heavily armed P-36s had four .30 caliber and two .50 caliber machine guns. Earlier models had only .30 caliber machine guns firing thru the propeller arc.

[Filipino pilots flew P-36 planes against Jap Zeros in the early days of the Philippines defense.]

Bulk of Fleet There

Gen. Marshall at this and two other conferences with his subordinates in February, 1941, brought up the possibility of a surprise attack by Japan on our fleet at Hawaii.

At a staff conference called by Marshall on Feb. 6 to discuss the defense of Pearl Harbor, the general, according to the conference record, "indicated there was a possibility of a Japanese attack."

Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, then chief of intelligence, told the group "that nothing in G-2 [intelligence] indicated any such probability."

Again on Feb. 19, Marshall told a meeting of the army general council that the Hawaiian base must be "prepared against a surprise attack from a trick ship or torpedo planes," and emphasized that "our whole navy power in general is concentrated there."

The Marshall-Short correspondence started with a long letter from Marshall to the Pearl Harbor commander, in which the then chief of staff offered his subordinate some fatherly advice on dealing with Adm. Kimmel at the Pacific base.

Marshall told Short that the fullest protection for the fleet was "the [underlined] major consideration" of the army and advised him to tell Kimmel that "everything humanely possible" was being done to strengthen Hawaii's defenses.

Sabotage Real Peril

"My impression of the Hawaiian problem," Marshall continued, "has been that if no serious harm is done us during the first six hours of known hostilities thereafter the existing defenses would discourage an enemy against the hazard of an attack. The risk of sabotage and the risk involved in a surprise raid by air and by submarine, constitute the real perils of the situation. Frankly, I do not see any landing threat in the Hawaiian islands so long as we have air superiority."

On March 6 Short wrote Marshall urgently requesting prompt action be taken to supply modern aircraft detection units. The Pearl Harbor commander said the detection range with equipment then available was only five miles.

Short Protests Delay

In this same letter Short protested a delay in Washington in approving a proposed site for an aircraft detection station, which he had proposed to place on Mount Haleakala in Hawaii. The proposed area was under jurisdiction of the interior department's park service, which, he noted, was withholding approval of the army's request.

Gen. Short, on March 15, again warned his chief of staff of the vulnerability of the Pacific base to air attack. He said perhaps the most serious shortage at the base was in long range aircraft detectors.

Marshall, replying on March 28, said plane detection units were scheduled for delivery to Pearl Harbor in April and May but that 16 three inch anti-aircraft guns were not slated for arival until December; and 115 37 inch anti-aircraft guns would not arrive until February, 1942.

Reunion in City

[TRIBUNE Photo]

Lt. Charles A. Wilde, Springfield, Mo., and his British bride, the former Joan Arnold, after her arrival on London to Chicago plane yesterday at Chicago airport.

Four members of Chicago's delegation to obtain designation of their city as the home of the united nations organization alighted from the London-Chicago American Airlines flagship yesterday and assured Mayor Kelly that Chicago has a "good chance" to become the capital of the world.

Members of the four-man delegation who rode the first direct London to Chicago flight were Corporation Counsel Hodes; William L. McFetridge, labor leader; Leverett S. Lyon, executive director of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and James M. Cleary, advertising executive. They were met at the airport by Mayor Kelly.

Cleary pointed out that a decision on the headquarters was expected to be delayed because 13 additional cities filed for consideration by the UNO hearing panel immediately before the Chicago delegation returned home.

EISENHOWER'S WIFE IN CHICAGO ON WAY TO EAST

Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, wife of the general, passed thru Chicago yesterday on her way to Washington, D. C. Mrs. Eisenhower, convalescing from bronchial pneumonia, arrived at the North Western station from Boone, Ia., in a special car and was transferred in an ambulance to a special car attached to the Pennsylvania's Manhattan Limited. She was accompanied by Maj. Gen. Howard Snyder, the Eisenhowers' personal physician, and Maj. Robert J. Schultz, transportation liaison officer to Gen. Eisenhower. Companions said Mrs. Eisenhower has almost recovered.

REVEAL KIMMEL WAR TALKS DAY BEFORE DEC. 7, '41

Planned an Offensive, Says His Aide

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Dec. 6 (AP)—On the day before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, Adm. Husband E. Kimmel and his war plans officer discussed the imminence of war with Japan and planned immediate offensive operations if war came, the latter disclosed today.

Almost immediately after the attack Kimmel was removed as commander of the Pacific fleet. He yet may be court martialed on charges of negligence.

Kimmel's war plans officer was Charles H. McMorris, then a captain, who today is a vice admiral and chief of staff and aide to Adm. Raymond A. Spruance, commander of the Pacific fleet.

Didn't Expect Air Attack

"I did not expect an air attack on Pearl Harbor," McMorris said in an exclusive interview on the eve of the fourth anniversary of the Japanese sneak raid. "But I did expect sabotage, submarine raids, and possibly other forms of attack in this area.

"I thought it could start any day. I fully expected it and believed in the end we would win."

The 59 year old naval veteran, who was Adm. Nimitz's chief of staff after participating in some of the South Pacific's hottest surface engagements and who was awarded the navy cross and two distinguished service medals for his work in the war, said that when the Japanese raiders came Dec. 7 he rushed to his office and did not leave it for several days.

Damage Disheartening

"It was disheartening to see the damage done by the Japanese and it was manifest we would have to forego offensive operations for some time despite our plans," he said.

"Except for the first few days of war following initial heavy losses, the confidence of the navy in achieving victory was never seriously shaken."

McMorris declared that for many years Pearl Harbor and Guam will be the United States' best Pacific bastions.

REFUSER OF JOB IS FINED $200; HE CAN WORK IT OUT

Edwin C. Damnitz, 32, of 1522 Greenview av., an unemployed tool and die maker, was sent to the Bridewell yesterday by Judge Leon Edelman in Town Hall court to work out a $200 fine for disorderly conduct.

Damnitz was arrested Nov. 16 for causing a disturbance in the state unemployment compensation office at 654 North av. Officials said they stopped compensation to Damnitz after he refused to accept jobs paying from $1.50 to $1.75 an hour.

CHURCHILL MOVE TO SCOLD LABOR PARTY DEFEATED

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP)—By a 381 to 197 vote, the house of commons tonight rejected a Conservative party motion of censure after a two day debate in which Winston Churchill charged that the Labor government was leading Britain "day by day nearer disaster."

Prime Minister Attlee, in the closing hours of the debate, denied the Conservative leader's charges that the Labor government had "fettered and hobbled" industry and enterprise, and impeded reconversion and demobilization.

Churchill had introduced the censure motion, which from the start had seemed certain of defeat by the predominantly Labor house.

Attlee declared during debate: "This vote of censure seems more to be a vote of censure against the electors. It seems to be a terrible shock that a government should come in, which was prepared to carry out its policies."

Sentenced to Die

Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, Japanese commander in the Philippines, who was sentenced to die by military tribunal following trial in Manila.

GEN. YAMASHITA FOUND GUILTY; DOOMED TO HANG

'Tiger' Thanks Court for His Fair Trial

to express my gratitude to the United States of America for having accorded to an enemy general the unstinted services of a staff of brilliant, conscientious, and upright American officers and gentlemen as defense counsel."

Failed to Provide Control

The most pertinent portion of the commission's finding, aside from the verdict itself, is the following: "Nonetheless, where murder and rape and vicious revengeful actions are widespread offenses, and there is effective attempt by a commander to discovered and control criminal acts, such a commander may be held responsible, even criminally liable, for the lawless acts of his troops, depending upon their nature and the circumstances surrounding them. . . . The commission concludes, [1] that a series of atrocities and other high crimes have been committed by members of the Japanese armed forces under your command; that they were not sporadic in nature but in many cases were methodically supervised by Japanese officers and noncommissioned officers and [2] that during the period in question you failed to provide effective control of your troops as was required by circumstances."

Goes to MacArthur

The verdict still must be reviewed by Gen. MacArthur, who, of course, has the power to change the death sentence. Meanwhile, the defense has filed a petition for a writ of certiorari with the United States Supreme court, air mailing a copy to Washington this morning. A petition asking that the United States high court halt the trial already had been pending before that body. The new legal move of which notice was given the court by cable, constitutes an appeal from an adverse decision of the Philippine Supreme court against halting of the trial.

As the verdict was handed down the case passed immediately into the hands of Lt. Gen. Wilhelm D. Styer, commander of American forces in the western Pacific, who appointed the trial body. Styer has the power to commute the sentence if he chooses, but if he approves the death penalty he must pass it on to MacArthur for final action.

Yamashita never once was accused of personally having harmed any one nor of having witnessed any of the brutalities charged to troops of his command. He was accused, however, by witnesses who were close to him of never once having lifted a finger to prevent atrocities.

"Too Busy," His Defense

Yamashita was the first of the top Japanese accused as war criminals to be tried.

In his own behalf Yamashita denied that he even knew of such atrocities as he heard described daily in the courtroom.

He also contended that he was only indirectly responsible as commander, for he was subject to orders from Tokyo and from Count Terauchi, commander of the southern regions, which included Manila.

The defense also made much of the trial commission admitting hearsay evidence and affidavits which would have been barred in United States civil courts.

The decision came on the 33d day of the trial, which had extended almost six weeks since it got under way on Oct. 29. The prosecution used most of the time up until Nov. 21 presenting detailed evidence of atrocities thruout the Philippines after Yamashita had taken command in October, 1944.

286 Witnesses Heard

During the month long trial which was held in the former residence of the high commissioner, 286 witnesses were heard and 40 others were summoned but not put on the stand.

The trial record reached 4,000 pages and the evidence covered 90 of the 123 items in the prosecution's bill of particulars.

Yamashita was on the witnes stand almost 20 hours. During this time Yamashita made an eloquent defense of his failure to prevent the slaughter of 60,000 persons, most of them civilians, pointing out that almost from the time he arrived in the Philippines Oct. 9, 1944, he was preoccupied with fighting American troops.

Many Atrocities Proved

The prosecution proved atrocity after atrocity, but was never completely successful in its efforts to show that Yamashita had ordered or knew of them. The charge against him was so worded, however, as not to make specific proof necessary.

The prosecution's mission, as announced by Kerr at the opening session, was simply to show such a wide pattern of atrocities that it would be evidence that Yamashita must have had some knowledge of their existence.

The trial commission included Major Generals Leo Donovan of Arlington, Va., and J. A. Lester of Columbia, S. C., and Brigadier Generals E. F. Bullene of Pacific Grove, Cal., and M. C. Handwerk of Washington, D. C.

Wife Spurns Aid Plea

TOKYO, Dec. 7 [Friday]—(AP)—Mrs. Tomoyuki Yamashita was quoted by the newspaper Mainichi today as saying she had rejected suggestions of friends that she appeal to Mrs. MacArthur "for help and justice for my husband. Such a matter is out of the question from the way of thinking of Japanese women," she was quoted.

INVENTS GADGET FOR AUTOMATIC BABY FEEDING

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 6 (AP)—A. D. Bloom, 21, former marine sergeant, got tired of climbing out of bed to feed the baby, so he invented what he calls the "baby feeder-ette."

The gadget is made of aluminum, and weighs 10 ounces. A bottle is suspended from the top of the frame, free moving and unweighted. The device can be placed in any conventional crib, buggy, or bassinette and will not tip, collapse, or rust.

"I'm working on an automatic burper as an accessory to this contraption," Bloom said.

W-G-N IS FIRST IN CHICAGO WITH 'TIGER' VERDICT

Chicago received its first news that Gen. Yamashita had been found guilty and sentenced to hang in Manila at 12:12 this morning over station W-G-N, which carried a special Mutual broadcast direct from the courtroom as Maj. Gen. R. B. Reynolds read the verdict. This was six minutes before the press services carried the first flash direct from Manila.

W-G-N came on the air at midnight prepared to transmit the special broadcast, but atmospheric conditions held it up for a few minutes. When it came Gen. Reynolds' voice, slowly breaking the news to the Japanese commander in English, was clear and distinct.

BROWNELL SAYS G. O. P. WILL WIN CONGRESS IN '46

National Committee to Open Session Today

BY ROBERT HOWARD

Republican leaders yesterday accepted the radicalism of the Truman New Deal as a major campaign issue, upon which National Chairman Herbert Brownell Jr. predicted that the G. O. P. would win control of both houses of congress in 1946.

Gov. Green and Rep. Martin [R., Mass.], house minority leader, will be the main speakers today when the Republican national committee meets in the Stevens hotel to plan for the 1946 congressional and 1948 Presidential elections.

"I have full confidence that we are going to take control of congress in 1946," Brownell said at a news conference.

3 G. O. P. Victories This Year

He pointed out that Republicans won the three special elections held this year to fill vacancies in the national house of representatives. In the 24th Illinois district the Democrats didn't enter a candidate. In the 2d Montana and 4th New Jersey districts the Democrats pledged themselves to stand by President Truman in upholding Rooseveltian policies. They were trimmed in both states. The Montana district had been Democratic and the New Jersey area Republican in the 1944 fourth term election.

On the ground that Republican members of congress are establishing party policies by their votes on roll calls, the statement of party principles they adopted in Washington a day earlier was indorsed by Brownell.

Calls Statement a Service

He issued a statement thanking the Republican members of congress for "what I regard as an outstanding public service." He added that the declaration drew the issues, voiced confidence in the voters' verdict in 1946, and asserted that the national headquarters will "take every step possible to see to it that the people are fully informed as to the issues."

The congressional statement defined the major issue as Republican constitutional Americanism versus "radicalism, regimentation, all-powerful burocracy, class exploitation, deficit spending, and machine politics." It pledged the Republicans to continue to work against communism and fascism and to support freedom of the individual, just enforcement of laws, local home rule, efficiency, and pay-as-you-go economy.

In behalf of Illinois county chairmen, Committeeman Werner W. Schroeder will submit a protest against eastern domination of the Republican party. The protest, drafted by a special committee, was submitted to Schroeder late yesterday.

Assails Eastern Bloc

"Too much emphasis has been placed in recent years upon the opinions and ideas of an apparent eastern bloc," it said. "We insist that the middle west is the fountainhead and the birthplace of Republicanism and that the true principles of the party are more truly exemplified here in the west."

The letter was signed by Chairmen Lewis Rinaker, Macoupin county; George M. Fisher, Cook county, and Peyton Berbling, Alexander county.

Speakers at tomorrow's sessions include Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers, Chicago, president of the National Federation of Women's Republican clubs, at a luncheon, and Brownell, Gov. Blue of Iowa and Sen. Hart of Connecticut at a banquet.

An early arrival was Clarence Budington Kelland, national committeeman for Arizona, who distributed copies of an "Arizona declaration" stating that the major issue is "between extreme radicalism and prudent conservatism." The Democrats are the radical party, and the Republicans in Arizona will seek votes as the self-declared conservative party, Kelland said. President Truman has established a radical party line for the Democrats, he said.

WIDOW WEEPS AT MENTION OF NURSE SLAYING

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 6 (AP)—Mrs. Annie Irene Mansfeldt sobbed bitterly on her murder trial witness stand today, "I'd give my life willingly if I could bring her back." She was speaking of Mrs. Vada Martin, whom she shot Oct. 4 on suspicion that the 36 year old nurse had stolen the love of Dr. John H. Mansfeldt, her physician husband.

Weeping without control, she sobbed, "The only person I'm sorry for are my children, Mr. Martin, and his sister, who is a lovely person."

The defense contends Mrs. Mansfeldt recalls nothing of the shooting; that she was under the effects of a sedative administered the night before by her husband.

MEXICO EYES FOREIGNERS

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6 [AP]—A new "population control" bill that would provide stricter control over foreigners in Mexico is being drafted for submission to congress next week, the government newspaper El Nacional said today. Many foreigners found here after their tourist permits expired have been ordered in recent weeks to leave.

ILLINOIS' VET AID PLAN IS BEST IN U. S., GREEN SAYS

Illinois' program of promoting the welfare of its war veterans is the most comprehensive developed by any state, Gov. Green said at a "Thanks to GI Joe" rally of northwest side citizens last night in the Ebinger school auditorium in Edison Park.

He said he brought the thanks of the whole state to the 3,000 men and women who entered service from Edison Park, Norwood Park, Park Ridge, Jefferson Park, Edgewood, Higgins, and Rosedale. He urged that the Victory Loan drive, "dedicated to GI Joe," be the means of expressing gratitude to the service man, and added, "There were seven drives for our protection, and this one, the eighth, is for his protection."

Forty-six acts of the last legislature affect Illinois veterans, he said. Among them was one creating a special commission to study a soldiers' bonus. It is now at work, he said, and will have its report ready for the next assembly.

SIX NAVY PLANES ARE MISSING OFF FLORIDA COAST

Hopes Dwindling for 27 Aboard Aircraft

Miami, Fla., Dec. 6 (AP)—Five navy torpedo bombers with 14 men aboard and a sixth navy rescue plane with 13 crew members tonight were the object of an air-sea hunt covering thousands of square miles off the Florida east coast.

Altho hopes of finding the planes are dwindling, navy officials said the aircraft had a high degree of buoyancy and that in similar emergencies the crews had been able to launch their life rafts "without even getting their feet wet."

Reënforced by the escort carrier Solomons, hundreds of army, navy, and coast guard planes and scores of surface craft searched the waters on a 400 mile front from Jacksonville to Miami.

"Gas for 75 Minutes"

A last, flickering message of distress, sent by radio from the five Avenger bombers on a training mission, said: "Have gas for 75 minutes more . . . can't tell whether over Atlantic or Gulf of Mexico." This indicated the planes had been caught in a blinding storm.

The navy in Miami said the bombers' last message, flashed at 4:25 p. m., Chicago time, yesterday, gave their bearings as 75 miles northeast of the Banana river naval station, which lies 200 miles north of Miami.

Comdr. Howard S. Roberts, executive officer at the Fort Lauderdale naval air station, where the flight began, said the airmen apparently were blown far off their course by strong winds.

Reports Freak Winds

The Miami weather bureau said freak winds, attended by gusts of 40 miles per hour or higher, as well as showers and thunderstorms, prevailed over the area off the Banana river station at the time when the last signal was received.

The sixth plane, a huge Martin Mariner bomber, set out to the rescue last night and was also believed down at sea.

A possible clew to the disappearance of one plane, probably the Martin, was flashed to the navy by a merchant ship, the Gaines Mills, which reported seeing an explosion in the air and what appeared to be an airplane spin into the sea off New Smyrna beach. Dozens of planes and surface craft combed the area today but found no wreckage.

A belief that the Avengers, caught by the sudden tropical dusk, might have all gone down in a mass collision while flying in a wing to wing formation was expressed by a veteran at Miami naval air station at Opa Locka.

Wants Divorce

RITA HAYWORTH

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 6 (AP)—Rita Hayworth said today she would divorce Orson Welles after two years of married life. The actress added they would make a joint statement as soon as Welles arrives in town tomorrow.

Miss Hayworth's decision would end one of Hollywood's most storied marriages. Their romance flourished in the fall of 1943 while Welles was operating a magic show for service men in Hollywood. The climax of the performance was when Orson sawed Rita in half before the awed GI's.

In December of the previous year, Rita had announced that she hoped to marry Victor Mature when he was out of the coast guard.

U.S. TO SEIZE JAP MINERALS USED IN ATOMIC BOMBS

Orders Arrest of Prince, Former Premier

TOKYO, Dec. 7 [Friday]—(AP)—Gen. MacArthur today took steps to make certain that Japan never can develop an atomic bomb.

The action came only a few hours after MacArthur had ordered the arrest of two of Emperor Hirohito's most trusted advisers—Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Marquis Koichi Kido—and seven other top criminal suspects.

MacArthur's headquarters announced in its newest order that every mineral resource which might permit creation of an atom bomb will be taken from Japan, even if it means shipping such minerals out of the country. Wherever possible, mining of such minerals will be banned.

Seven Others Listed

Under direction of Lt. Col. H. G. Schenck, director of MacArthur's natural resources section, every potential war mineral is being studied for a place on the ban list. All mining will be limited to peace time needs and research for war will be outlawed.

Ordered arrested with Konoye and Kido were seven other top military and civilian war mongers.

Konoye, who served as one of Japan's most prized "front men," had been premier three times. Kido, a shrewd wirepuller, served as Emperor Hirohito's right hand man thruout the war.

Blow to Cabinet

Tokyo received another shock before it had recovered from MacArthur's announcement. Japanese Communists announced they would release on Saturday a list of 1,000 asserted Japanese war criminals, including the emperor and empress.

In the diet, Premier Shidehara said his government was in no position to criticize the allied lists. He said he had no information on how many persons the occupation authorities intended to indict or try.

The Japanese war crimes trials probably will start some time in January with war time Premier Hideki Tojo and members of his cabinet among the first to be tried, Joseph B. Keenan, special staff counsel for Gen. MacArthur, who arrived last night, said today.

Keenan said the suspects probably would be tried in groups by a court appointed by MacArthur. He added other nations had been invited to send nominees for membership on the court but no names had been received.

ENGINEER WINS ACQUITTAL ON KILLING CHARGE

A jury in the Champaign county Circuit court at Urbana yesterday acquitted Joseph Duetchey, 54, of 150 E. 113th st., an Illinois Central locomotive engineer, on a charge of manslaughter in the death of Carl T. Robbins, 44, an Urbana truck driver, in a Champaign restaurant last Aug. 19. Deutchey testified that Robbins "swung at me first" in a fight. Robbins' skull was fractured when he fell to the sidewalk. Six state witnesses testified they saw Robbins take no part in the fight which they said began between another man and his wife. The jury deliberated two hours.

Urge Physical Medicine Aids for Vet Hospitals

Governors of the American Congress of Physical Medicine, at their annual meeting yesterday in the Palmer House, called upon the veterans' administration to provide every veterans' hospital with a fully equipped department of physical medicine headed by a competent physician trained in occupational and physical therapy. The group also condemned socialized medicine as being opposed to the high standards of the medical profession. It voted to hold the organization's 1946 convention in New York City Sept. 4 thru Sept. 7.

PISTOL, WATCH, RING TAKEN

Burglars took a pistol, wristwatch, diamond ring, and a pen and pencil set from the home of Mrs. Charlotte Cohen of 1347 N. Dearborn st., she told police yesterday.

ARMY TO YIELD VAUGHAN TO VET ADMINISTRATION

Vaughan General hospital at Hines will be turned over to the veterans' administration when it is closed by the army, but no closing date has been set, an army announcement said yesterday.

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki said he received a telegram yesterday from Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] stating the change was effective immediately. Officers at Vaughan and at near-by Edward Hines Jr. hospital, already operated by the veterans' administration, said they had received no word of a change.

Vaughan consists of 67 brick buildings in a 100 acre area and has 1,525 beds. Ground for the hospital was broken July 1, 1943, and patients began arriving in August, 1944. The original cost was placed at approximately 4½ million dollars.

CRIPPLED SHIPS, LADEN WITH GIs, HEAD FOR PORT

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—The troopships Henry Ward Beecher and George W. McCrary headed for Bermuda tonight after floundering in the storm whipped Atlantic for two days because of mechanical trouble.

The Beecher, which lost its propeller about 510 miles off the British island, was being towed by a navy rescue tub. The navy said it expected to reach port Sunday. The McCrary was proceeding under its own power. There was no indication when it would dock.

The navy said the army transport Saturnia would sail from here late today for Bermuda to pick up the troops aboard the two ships, so they could be home by Christmas. The Beecher has 541 soldiers aboard and the McCrary 586.

Meanwhile, the Greek vessel Navarchos Koundouriotis, with 26 troops aboard, was due here some time tonight. The ship lost its propellor. The 7,200 ton merchant ship John Gibbons, which went aground off the beach near Cape Henry, Va., was expected to be floated soon.

Some words fool you:

HAIL means...

but BALLANTINE Ale & Beer always means...

Purity, Body, Flavor!

A confusing word, "hail." It's the frozen stuff that falls during a thunderstorm. It's also the raised voice that you hope will attract a cabby's attention; but the taxi situation being what it is, attention is frequently all you do attract.

In pleasant contrast to these words that fool you, there's Ballantine. Ballantine always means PURITY, BODY, FLAVOR . . . the qualities symbolized by Peter Ballantine's famous 3-ring trade mark. Meet and enjoy them in a dinner-time bottle of Ballantine tonight.

30 MORE SLAIN IN FIGHTING IN RED-HELD IRAN

New Clashes Reported in Three Towns

TEHRAN, Dec. 6 (AP)—Insurgents have killed 30 persons in new attacks in Azerbaijan province, official reports from Tabriz announced tonight. Premier Ibrajim Hakimi demanded freedom of movement into the soviet-occupied area for the Iranian government to "redress the grievances of the people."

Insurrectionist Democrat party members attacked troop billets at Sarab, killing 21 gendarmes and two officers, the reports relayed by the Tabriz radio said. Six other persons were reported killed near Marand, between Tabriz and the Russian frontier. The police chief at Tabriz was killed in still another clash, the radio said.

Marand Chief Slain

The local police chief and president of the local tribunal were slain in the Marand fighting, Tabriz reported.

[The Moscow radio said last night Persian soldiers garrisoned at Tabriz opened fire with machine guns on a crowd "taking part in a religious ceremony" and wounded four persons.]

Other advices received in the capital said the insurrectionists had captured the Caspian port of Bandar Shah, 130 miles northeast of Tehran, and had occupied government buildings.

700 Insurgents Elected

Elections were completed at Tabriz today for national assembly posts. A Democrat party announcement said 700 Democrats were elected.

Earlier Premier Hakimi had charged that "only about 200 genuine rebels" were involved in the Azerbaijan uprising. The Iranian government, blocked by the Russians from sending troops into Azerbaijan, insists insurgents there are trying to establish autonomy. Moscow newspapers said police and large land owners had interfered with Democratic mass meetings and elections, precipitating fighting.

Henry Lustig

United States Atty. John F. X. McGohey said the sum, which represented taxes for the years 1940-'44 inclusive, was the largest ever recorded in an indictment filed in the southern federal district of New York.

Others indicted are E. Allan Lustig, 44, his nephew and secretary of each of the seven corporations; Joseph Sobel, 56, a certified public accountant; Wallace Platt, 35, and Martin Platt, 45, brothers and office manager and bookkeeper, respectively, for Lustig.

BLAME UNRRA AND JEWS FOR FILTH OF CAMP

U. S. Army Chiefs Find Conditions Appalling

LANDSBERG, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP) — High-ranking United States army officials, investigating the displaced persons camp here, today found 6,200 homeless Jews jammed into a space designed for 4,200, with many living in filthy conditions. They placed much of the blame on the Jews themselves as well as on UNRRA officials operating the camp.

A. A. Glassgold

The inspection group was headed by Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, chief of staff; Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, 3d army commander; Maj. Gen. Albert W. Kenner, surgeon general for the European theater, and Simon H. Rifkind, army adviser on Jewish affairs.

Accompanied by a score of news correspondents, they came here by special train from Frankfurt thru a snowstorm to investigate charges by Lee Srole, camp welfare officer, that the inmates were underfed, ill-clothed, overcrowded and menaced by the threat of a "disastrous epidemic."

No Danger of Epidemic

After the inspection, the army officials asserted there was no imminent danger of an epidemic.

Unsanitary conditions in many of the barracks were appalling. Human excrement littered the floor of some of the rooms. When Gen. Smith saw this, he turned to UNRRA Camp Director A. A. Glassgold, of New York City, and said: "I would be ashamed."

Later he told a committee of camp inmates "you folks are not doing your part to keep the place sanitary."

Smith also blamed much of the overcrowding on Jews who are slipping unauthorized into the American zone from the British and Russian areas at the rate of nearly 3,000 weekly. Nearly 80 per cent of them are coming from Poland.

Bring Relatives from Poland

Smith estimated that 90 per cent of the Jews repatriated to Poland were sneaking back, with many bringing their relatives.

Kenner said the food at the camp was adequate, tho monotonous and too starchy. He said he found no evidence of malnutrition. He also said he found the Jews were warmly clad, tho short of undergarments. All quarters, he added, were sufficiently heated by stoves.

Smith told the inmates' committee the army would seek additional housing, the lack of which he blamed partly on UNRRA officials for failing to make proper requisitions in writing.

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 6 (AP)—Four British bombers today smashed two houses in Bandoeng serving as headquarters for Indonesian resistance forces, and an official British statement said 38 Indonesians were killed in skirmishes in the Soerabaja sector. This was announced as Netherlands and British leaders were scheduled to begin a conference in Singapore called by Adm. Mountbatten, Southeast Asia commander, to deal with the situation in the East Indies and Indo-China.

SHERIFF PLANS BUREAU TO FILE SEX CRIME DATA

Sheriff Michael F. Mulcahy announced yesterday that he intended to open a new bureau to collect and keep records on sex crimes in Cook county outside the limits of Chicago. He would, he said, ask all suburban communities to coöperate with the highway police force in furnishing accurate records on such crimes.

The announcement was made at a county board finance meeting. Mulcahy said that for the present no additional personnel would be needed, but asked $2,000 to buy and print forms.

The county board was asked by County Recorder Edward J. Kaindl to appropriate $44,000 in salaries and $74,000 for supplies to carry on the work of registering discharged service men and women. The money is in addition to the regular expenses of the offices; the state law provides there shall be no charge for the registration.

Britain to Delay Moving Some Troops in Iceland

LONDON, Dec. 6 [Reuters]—Withdrawal of the royal air force from Iceland will be virtually completed by next March, but because of arrangements for peace time air traffic control some of the signals personnel may have to remain for a time after that date, John Strachey, undersecretary for air, said today.

CHINESE HAVE A WAY—USUALLY IT'S THEIR OWN

Helping Them Gives GIs a Headache

BY JOSEPH HEARST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CHINCHOW, Manchuria, Dec. 4 [Delayed]—Giving the Chinese a helping hand has produced its headaches for American officers and its share of dirty jobs for seamen who manned the ships on which the Chinese 13th and 52d armies were transported from Kowloon to Chinwangtao, but it also produced a series of incidents amusing to Americans who fight war on a highly efficient basis.

Among the dirty tasks were those that fell to the men who had to clean and disinfect the transports after they had been used by the Chinese. The 13th was the first army moved and it didn't occur to the Americans that the Chinese would be unfamiliar with modern plumbing until entire ships were filled with unpleasant odors. This situation was corrected when captains sent teams of instructors below decks to show the Chinese how to use toilet facilities and how not to stand fully dressed in showers with the idea that this was the way to wash their clothes.

Leave Ammunition Behind

Moving the army a couple of thousand miles from its base apparently involved matters of supply Chinese officers hadn't reckoned with, as illustrated by the fact, which can now be disclosed, that when the 13th arrived in Chinwangtao, it had only enough ammunition for one day of all out fighting.

Adm. Daniel E. Barbey was astounded when a Chinese general asked him to provide ammunition for the efficient equipment with which the army had been furnished by the United States. When he asked if the army hadn't been supplied with ammunition also, the general said that it had, but that this was too heavy to move by men and horses, so most of it had been cached in Indo-China when the army moved from that base.

The fact also developed in transporting the Chinese that it was not uncommon, apparently, for the Chinese to take their girl friends along from camp to camp. When the ships were loading at Kowloon, one general who arrived with a bevy of girls was very surprised when informed that women don't travel on navy transports with troops. The general bowed gracefully to the order and, moreover, issued instructions that so long as he was to be denied feminine companionship on the voyage, no other officers might smuggle girls aboard.

Then There's the Boy, 7

However, the order was not strictly obeyed. One ship's captain was surprised to find a number of women sharing quarters with men. The Chinese explained that these women were secretaries necessary to the welfare of the army, so the captain, considering that the women seemed content and that the ship was then in the middle of the Yellow sea, bowed his way out and retired to the bridge.

Then there is the story of the 7 year old boy who traveled with the 52d army and became the pet of seamen, who fed him extra rations and gave him clothing when he marched away from the ship at Changwangtao. Later, they learned that the boy wasn't traveling alone, but with his mother.

There also was the incident of the army's horses and mules, an incident in which the Chinese appear to have come off best in an argument with the Chinese theater command. The Chinese wanted to bring 800 pack horses from Kowloon in American ships built to carry men and machines. The navy rebelled, but the Chinese insisted they needed horses for transport, which was true enough.

Finally, the theater command said that if the Chinese would leave their horses at home they would fix the army up with transportation. And that is how the Chinese forces now in Manchuria got 36 two-and-one-half ton trucks that were lying around as surplus.

"But I like my shirts better when she doesn't iron them. There's buttons on 'em."

JAPS FAILED AT PEARL HARBOR, SAYS SPRUANCE

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Dec. 6 (AP)—The Japanese failed to wipe out the United States' first line of defense in the Pacific in their attack on Pearl Harbor because they did not fully appreciate sea power as an offensive weapon, Adm. Spruance said today.

The admiral, now commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, made the observation in a pre-anniversary statement on the sneak attack four years ago tomorrow.

"Instead of following up his initial successes, the enemy diverted his navy, which then far outclassed ours, to support of troop movements in the Southwest Pacific," said Spruance. The Japanese might have won a quick and decisive victory had the base at Pearl Harbor been destroyed, smashed, the admiral said.

AMERICAN AIR FIELD IN CHINA WARNED AGAINST BLOOD PURGE

HONGKONG, Dec. 6 (AP)—Chinese guards around an American operated air field at Canton were increased today following the disclosure by American officers that an anonymous note threatening an "American blood purge" had been delivered at the field.

A 6 p. m. curfew was imposed on United States personnel in the Canton city area by the commander of the United States air transport command.

Rumors have been rife in Canton over Communist infiltrations and minor raids by irregulars. Approximately 100 Americans are billeted in the European colony on Shamgen Island.

DISCUSS FLYING CHINESE TROOPS INTO MANCHURIA

PEIPING, China, Dec. 6 (AP)—Arrangements for the air transportation of Chinese national government troops to Russian occupied Changchun, capital of Manchuria, were reported under discussion today at Changchun.

At the same time, it was learned that Gen. Tu Li-ming's nationalist veterans of the Burma campaign, who have marched from North China to the vicinity of Mukden, would enter that city "within the next few days."

SKIPPER GAVE 'ABANDON SHIP,' COURT IS TOLD

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—A survivor of the ill fated cruiser Indianapolis today expressed a firm belief that "no one could know the ship was going to sink until she took her last list and started to roll over."

Chief Gunner Cecil Harrison of Long Beach, Cal., was a witness before the navy court martial trying the ship's commanding officer, Capt. Charles B. McVay III., on charges of negligence and inefficiency in the loss of the ship.

There was a sudden flash and explosion, followed quickly by another, he said. After the explosion the ship settled about level, still riding high in the water. After several minutes the vessel took a slight list, he said, and held that position for several more minutes. Then, he said, there was a severe, sudden list, and the ship continued to roll until she sank, about 15 minutes after the explosions.

One of the 12 survivors of the ship who testified today said he heard Capt. McVay shout orders from the bridge to abandon ship about 10 minutes after the explosion.

One of the most significant moments in human history was that in which Johannes Gutenberg took from his primitive hand press the first words ever printed from movable type.

HE UNCHAINED the BOOKS . . . and FREED the thoughts of men

"Please, Brother Anselm, unchain the book! Please let me take it home to read!"

It was hard to refuse the bright-eyed boy who had learned so well, and loved so much to read. But the good monk shook his head.

"If this book were to be lost," he said, "it would never be replaced; for it took many years to make, and of its kind it is the only one in the world."

So, young Johannes Gutenberg went home empty-handed, the conviction that there should be books enough for all already burning fiercely in his breast.

In those days books were made laboriously, one at a time, by lettering upon parchment with pen and ink. The making of such a book might take many months or years. Small wonder that they were available only to the learned or wealthy few!

But in 1436 Gutenberg, still faithful to his dream, perfected one of the most important inventions of all time—the art of printing from movable type.

At one stroke, books were brought within the reach of all!

The significance of this great step forward in human progress was admirably stated by Gutenberg himself. "Let me tell you, wife," he is reported to have said, "nothing yet invented by man ever made such inroads upon ignorance as this will make. . . . Everybody, by and by, will learn to read written language; and the knowledge locked up in cloisters will be poured out freely to the thirsty multitudes."

He was supremely right. Out of Gutenberg's rude press flowed a sparkling rivulet of words which was to swell into the mighty torrent of books, newspapers and magazines which we all read and enjoy today.

Reading Enriches Life

Gutenberg knew, as this world's great have always known, that the richest rewards of life are to be won by an active and well-stored mind. And in reading he saw the key which would open to teeming millions the golden storehouse of knowledge. For it is the impression value of what one sees that registers indelibly and is never forgotten.

Reading is the great educator, the great source and fountainhead of ideas. And reading of a variety and abundance beyond Gutenberg's wildest dreams is to be found within the pages of The American Weekly. There is reading about people . . . their hopes and fears . . . their joys and heartbreaks . . . their loves, hatreds, follies . . . their achievements and disappointments. There is reading about science, art, literature . . . about history and exploration. Two recent articles, for example—"Formula for Bliss," a hint on marital happiness; and "Are the Ice Ages Really Behind Us?" a scientific discussion of climate—give some idea of The American Weekly's wide range of subjects.

This fascinating and ever-new story of life in our time is brought regularly before the men, women and children in more than 8,000,000 homes by The American Weekly, the magazine which is distributed through a group of great Sunday newspapers from coast to coast.

The manufacturer who associates his product or his company's name with such an influence is tying in with the most powerful known force in advertising.

NEW ZEALAND KNOWS

The New Zealand government, like any one not shutting his eyes to the facts, knows what happened at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. The government's analysis of the evidence submitted to the congressional investigation in Washington is presented in its official organ, the Standard.

The analysis states that as American public opinion was unready for war, the decision was reached "to leave exposed a flank for the Japanese to attack. The whole emphasis of Gen. Marshall's orders to Gen. Short bears this out. Short was advised to take precautions, but not to disturb the civilian population because it was desirable that Japan should commit the first overt act."

The flank that was exposed was the fleet that was sunk and the 3,000 men who were killed at Pearl Harbor. Months before Pearl Harbor, unknown to Japan, our intelligence had cracked the Jap secret code. Administration leaders and the high command knew everything the Japs were saying and planning among themselves. The essence of the analysis of White House strategy made by the Standard is that specific knowledge pointing to impending war and the time and place of attack was withheld from the commanders in Hawaii.

The most important decoded information which came into the hands of the administration was the 14 part Japanese message of Dec. 6 and 7, unmistakably pointing to war at 1 p. m. Washington time on Dec. 7—sunrise, or the hour for surprise air attack, at Oahu—and the fake weather broadcast of "east winds rain," by which Tokyo apprised its diplomatic corps thruout the world that a state of war existed with the United States from Dec. 4 on despite the absence of a formal declaration.

Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, army intelligence chief, has testified that the first 13 parts of the message, dealing with the Jap rejection of Secretary of State Hull's ultimatum of Nov. 26, were in his hands the night of the 6th, but that he could "see no military significance in them." He did not deliver them to Chief of Staff Marshall that night, but he could not say whether they had gone to the White House that night or not, for it was not his business, but that of the navy, to service the President with decoded information.

Miles admitted he knew what was in the Jap communication by 10:30 p. m. the night of the 6th. He said that the 14th part of the message, instructing Japan's emissaries to break off negotiations, was not received and decoded until between 7 and 8 a. m. on the 7th. Because Marshall was out horseback riding, this intelligence, the only meaning of which could be war, and war at once, was not given the chief of staff until 11:25 a. m. the same morning. Marshall's belated warning, sent by commercial radio, reached Short long after the Jap attacking force had returned to its carriers.

As to the "winds" message, the investigating committee's counsel, William D. Mitchell, a lifelong Democrat, has offered as his personal opinion that it was never sent. He asked Gen. MacArthur in Tokyo to check whether it had been broadcast and MacArthur was unable to find a record that it had. This would be presumptive evidence if there were no other, but, unfortunately for the Roosevelt apologists, there is.

In the suppressed portion of the army Pearl Harbor board's report are these flat statements:

"The original message [the 'winds' message] has now disappeared from the navy files and cannot be found. It was in existence just after Pearl Harbor and was collected with other messages for submission to the Roberts commission. Copies were in existence in various places, but they have all disappeared.

"The radio station logs, showing reception of the message, have been destroyed within the last year. Capt. Safford [of navy intelligence] testified that this message, and everything else they got from Nov. 12 on, was sent to the White House by the navy. It was a circulated copy that circulated to the White House and the navy.

"It was this message which the army witnesses testified was never received by the army. It was a clear indication to the United States as early as Dec. 4. The vital nature of this message can be realized."

For what possible reason except politics are facts of such paramount importance still suppressed by the New Deal administration? Why does not Mr. Mitchell read into evidence these findings and others of equal gravity in the 52 still suppressed pages of the army board report? Why does he put in his defense for Mr. Roosevelt without first putting in the evidence which shows the defense to be a fraud? If the government of far away New Zealand can arrive at the truth with so little effort, why should an American congressional committee experience such difficulty in reaching the same elementary conclusions?

FREE-HAND LAW

Hartley Shawcross, the British attorney general, made a long speech at the Nuernberg trial the other day, intended to persuade the judges that the law which they are making up as they go along is not ex post facto law. He referred with particular emphasis to the Kellogg-Briand pact, the outlawry of war treaty which was signed by practically all the nations of the world, including Germany.

In fact, the Kellogg-Briand pact was not a criminal statute and no criminal statute was ever enacted in accordance with it. The late Mr. Salmon O. Levinson of this city, who was the real author of the pact, always insisted that it carried no sanctions. No responsible official in this or any other country ever pretended that it laid down an international criminal law under which individuals could be tried or punished. Obviously it didn't, for if anything of the sort had been contemplated, some provision would have been made then or subsequently for a court before which cases arising under the treaty could be tried. If the Germans can be tried under the Kellogg pact, why haven't proceedings been instituted to punish those who are resorting to war as an instrument of policy in Java and Iran?

What we are seeing is a gross violation of the fundamental principle of American criminal law—the principle that men can be tried only for crimes which were clearly defined in statutes at the time the alleged crime was committed. It is profoundly disturbing to find an American sitting as a judge in such a trial and another American, himself a justice of the United States Supreme court, as the leading figure in the prosecution. Needless to say, they are both New Dealers. Their conduct at Nuernberg is a clear indication of what they would have done to improvise criminal law in this country save for the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

WHY REPUBLICANS LOSE ELECTIONS

The Republican national committee is meeting today in Chicago. Why, we don't know. Certainly the party would have been better served had the majority of its members mailed in their resignations.

Of all the professions none should be more characterized by the ability and willingness to learn from past mistakes than that of politics. The national committee seems incapable of learning. Not only has it made great mistakes but its members display a stupid reluctance to acknowledge them and an equally stupid determination to continue them. That, incidentally, is about the only determination that can be attributed to the committee.

The party made fatal errors in the nominations of Willkie and Dewey. The country may have suffered by the candidates' defeats, but the party did not, because thereby it escaped the onus for their acts had they been elected—an onus that undoubtedly would have destroyed it. The party, however, was gravely injured indirectly because the two incompetent candidates dragged down with them in failure a great many useful congressmen.

From its experiences the national committee should have learned that wishy-washy policy, the policy of trying to carry water on both shoulders, the policy of trying to appease every one and offend no one, is a complete failure. There are certain elements in the nation that are going to be against the Republican party, no matter whom it nominates or what it advocates. Mr. Dewey has demonstrated that in New York, where his flirtation with the radicals, while they may have benefited him personally, have injured the prospects of the party in a national election. Yet, in the face of Dewey's repudiation in the recent New York municipal election, his henchman, Mr. Brownell, will no doubt be on hand today, endeavoring to perpetuate the bankrupt leadership, or lack of leadership, of Dewey and Wall street.

The Democratic party has a monopoly on being the foreign party. It is hell-bent on giving America away. What can the Republicans promise to those who want to betray their country that can wean them from their Democratic allegiance? They are satisfied where they are. Obviously the Republican party should be strongly American. Otherwise the committee might as well dissolve. If it fails to give the people of the nation an alternative to present policies it has no reason for being.

The Democratic party also has a monopoly of the radicals. It has solidly enrolled the Communists, the lawless element among the labor leaders, the enemies of free enterprise, and the peddlers of nostrums to be financed at vast public expense. It is the party of waste, and the wasters and spoilers are not going to desert it. The Republican party should stop stumbling over its own feet in the effort to represent itself as "liberal." As Alf Landon noted as long ago as 1936, that word now connotes nothing more than a ready disposition to spend other people's money.

The Republican party should be the only thing that it can consistently be in view of its record, the party of conservatism and conservation. It should be the party pledged to save the good things of American life and to give the American people the opportunity to do for themselves instead of having the government do for them.

An American party and a conservative party can win elections. A party which sets out to deny all principles and to present itself as a carbon copy of the alien party and the radical party offers the voters no choice and gets just the support which it deserves, enough to place it second in the returns.

SAHIBS' MOUTHPIECE

The London Illustrated News devotes the first page of its Nov. 10 issue to a photograph of Dr. Soekarno, leader of the Indonesian nationalists, standing with his wife and child before their home in Java while his one man guard is being changed. The caption refers to the modest home as "the center of Indonesian pretensions." The word "pretensions" is carefuly chosen. The dictionary states that it refers to "a claim assumed or advanced: usually in a bad sense, as his pretensions are baseless; he made no pretensions to honesty."

The Illustrated News shows the usual disposition of the British press to dispense with all considerations of conscience and decency when empire interests and the profits of the big boys are concerned. It hastens to brand any aspirations of oppressed colonial peoples for independence as mere "pretensions." The inference is that they ought to know their place; they ought to submit with docility to exploitation for the greater glory of the British and Dutch imperialists and the aggrandizement of shareholders in the mother countries. Any hopes of a better lot are, as the Illustrated News puts it, "pretensions," which British arms are endeavoring to render vain.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

"Chicago History," quarterly publication of the Chicago Historical society; fall, 1945; vol. 1, no. 1.

This neatly printed and well illustrated pamphlet deserves a review, but the Sunday book section of THE TRIBUNE, which has a large staff of hands engaged in that trade, says that it is on a Christmas season merry-go-round. This column, therefore, welcomes the baby, of which Paul M. Angle, the new director of the society, is the father. You may take a well-deserved bow, Paul, and then pass the cigars.

We count ten articles and four half-tone pictures in Mr. Angle's pocket-size brochure, running to 24 pages of pleasant and instructive reading. Its price is a year's membership in the society, which includes, of course, various other benefits. For further information, consult its editor in his fine Georgian museum in Lincoln park.

* * *

Among the topics with which Mr. Angle whets the historical appetite is "A Guide to the City of Chicago: Its Public Buildings, Places of Amusement, Commercial, Benevolent, and Religious Institutions; Churches, Hotels, Railroads, etc., with a Map of the City and Numerous Illustrations of the Principal Buildings," published in 1868. We salute this rare item with pleasure, for we own a copy, and have turned it into "copy" several times. Its illustrations are admirable, as Mr. Angle says, and the entire job is proof that post-Civil war Chicago was quite a town.

* * *

In 1868 the Chicago Historical society was 12 years old, and according to this guidebook it had recently erected "a noble building on Ontario st., between N. Clark and Dearborn sts." Details are given: "An elegant, fireproof structure, built of brick and stone, 42 feet front, 90 feet in depth, and three stories high, forming only one wing of the main building which, it is presumed, will be needed before many years." There, in the early 1880s, the massive three-volume history of Chicago usually designated as "Andreas," after its publisher, was written by a staff largely composed of Chicago's best newspaper men.

THIS IS AMERICA

This is America:
These far-flung prairies, orchard lands,
And mountain heights of fir and pine;
Wide plains that feed a starving world
When war's red banner is unfurled;
This God-lent wealth of field and mine;
Proud cities built by eager hands.

This is America;
These factories of fervent toil
And myriad marts of fruitful trade,
With busy streets of hope and zeal;
Fair shrines of art, that serve to heal
These churches, built on freedom's soil.

This is America!
Our hope of peace and liberty,
Our dream of equal rights for all.
With no mad threats of tyrant lords,
No need have we of guns and swords.
Let no dire fate our dreams befall!
God keep our land forever free!

In Memory of a Parrot

As I was about to sit down at my typewriter, my hand almost reached toward the back of my chair to give Bob's head a pat. He always sat there when I wrote, and altho it is five months since he died, I still cannot get used to the idea that he is gone.

Bob was a yellowhead Mexican parrot that I raised from a fledgling. I had him for 17 years. He loved to sit on my typewriter table, nibble at the keys, and explore the gadgets. One of his tricks—one that I miss the most—was his habit of greeting me each morning with a softly-whispered "Hello, there." If he was in mischief anywhere in the apartment he would always give himself away with a faint "Yoo-hoo" when I called him.

Bob's cage stands covered in a corner, and it seems to keep some part of him still near. To me he was more than a bird. He seemed human.

Looks westward in December.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0800, gives personal interviews.]

T. G. asks: "Are veterans in Hines hospital permitted to have visitors at any time? If not what are the visiting days and hours?"

Patients in the veterans' administration hospital at Hines, Ill., are permitted to have visitors on Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday each week and on all national holidays. Visiting hours are from 2 to 4 p. m. Members of the American Women's Voluntary services are stationed at the hospital to aid visitors in locating friends and relatives. Only three visitors are permitted to see a patient at one time.

F. R. asks: "Is it necessary to go out to Hines hospital to file a claim with the veterans' administration and to obtain a certificate of eligibility for education under the GI bill?"

No. Effective yesterday, the veterans' administration has a new downtown contact office. This office is at 366 W. Adams st. and has a staff equipped to assist in filing claims and to answer all questions about rights and benefits available under all laws administered by the veterans' administration.

L. R. writes: "When stationed in a southern camp in the United States two years ago I married a girl in a near-by town. Before going overseas I made her beneficiary of my $10,000 insurance policy. Now I am about to be discharged from service and my wife has informed me she will not leave her home town and is considering divorcing me. Can I change the beneficiary of my policy now or must I wait until she gets a divorce?"

You may change the beneficiary of your insurance policy at will.

THE DROPPED ORGAN TYPE

THE organs of our human workshop are arranged neatly—a place for everything and everything in its place. Our Creator also gave us the power to move the body and change position at will.

Hence the internal structures are fastened securely to the trunk with just enough leeway to allow some displacement without interfering with function.

Now and then organs wander more than nature intended. On standing, the stomach or intestines may slide into the pelvic region. The kidneys, especially the one on the right, may descend beyond the normal boundary. The uterus, too, may "fall," as well as the spleen and liver. In each instance, changing to an upright posture is necessary and, with few exceptions, return to the regular locality takes place on lying down. Since most of us spend two-thirds of our day out of bed, we can see that the "innards" of those who are addicted to ptosis are drooping most of the time.

Ligaments, muscles, and fat help to keep these structures in place. The abdominal wall can be likened to a sling, holding the contents of this region. By contracting, it is able to overcome the "shift" which occurs on standing. When we lie on the back it relaxes, as it is not called upon to work.

During our development, the gastric pouch and bowel project into the abdominal cavity and their attachments are carried with them. After full growth these fibers continue to hold them in place. Other organs rely upon their neighbors for support, whereas the kidneys are firmly imbedded in a pad of fat and fibrous tissue. Should any of these props become weakened or lax we can understand why sagging develops. After a long, grueling illness, with loss of weight, the adipose tissue surrounding the kidneys may be reduced markedly, leading to "movable kidney." This is not serious unless the ureter, which travels from this organ to the bladder, becomes kinked. Should the flow of urine be blocked, severe pain may ensue.

The individual who exhibits a general falling of the viscera is usually the lean and lank type with a narrow chest and abdomen. The intestinal organs have no other choice but to assume this position. Many of these persons have poor resistance—they are not as strong as their more squarely built fellows. They tire quickly, are nervous, and often present signs of indigestion. Many blame their troubles on the fact that the stomach has slid down, but in reality this phenomenon is no more the culprit than a long face or thin feet.

As further proof, physicians observe numerous individuals without symptoms in whom the alimentary tract is equally low. Actually, so long as the organ works, it makes little difference where it is. On the other hand, should other structures become crowded by this displacement, discomfort may be exhibited.

The majority do well by gaining weight and building up the general physical condition. The abdominal muscles should be strengthened by exercise. In case these "pulleys" are slack, especially to the extent of a "baywindow," the wearing of a support may prove helpful. Rarely is surgery necessary to tighten the over-stretched fibers. One of the worst features of the malady is being told about the "fallen" organs. This knowledge adds kindling to the fire and increases anxiety.

DIVERTED HAIRS

R. E. writes: What can be done for ingrown hairs on the face?

REPLY

This is usually a shaving problem, due principally to cutting the beard too close or going against the grain. Injuries near the follicle itself may alter the course of the hair, leading to recurrences in the same spot. In these circumstances it is best to pluck the offending bristle.

POISON WEED

R. Y. writes: What is the disease called "trembles" like?

REPLY

The term is self-descriptive. Cows that feed on the poisonous snakeroot stagger, tremble and go into convulsions. Humans contract the malady by using dairy products from diseased cattle. Abraham Lincoln's mother is said to have died from this affliction.

BLARNEY

The Deductocrats

How worthy is our simple plan
To elevate the common man!
To regiment the myriad mobs
Of workers, and insure our jobs;
To nick each check of toiling brother
For tribute to this, that, and t'other;
A plan that smells somewhat of dole,
But has, in fact, a noble goal.
A noble goal! To make life plus
And safe for all, including us,
Ah, happy, happy, happy us,
Who keep deducts in iron vaults
And dance to the Missouri Waltz.

The Merry-Go-Round

Most fascinating press release of the post-war: "He is on his way home. But HOW will you wear your hair?"

Plows and Donkeys

Mr. Roosevelt kept miniature ships, fake cigars, and practical jokesters' implements with which to twit the press on his desk. The Quiz Kids, who paid his successor a call last week, report that on Mr. Truman's desk are only an alabaster donkey, a model jeep, a metal plow, a set of pens, a picture of Mrs. Truman, a bowl of flowers, and an appointment book. A silvered horseshoe hangs over the door. Appreciating the few minutes the President could give them, Richard Williams, one Q. K., said to Harve Fischman, another, as they went out the White House gates: "It's too bad we are so busy we couldn't give the President more of our time."

Note on Eager Learning

The Japs aren't wasting a minute. Two days after the surrender on board the Missouri last August a marine we know bought on the docks, and sent this way, a miniature Jap silk flag. Special rates to incoming Americans. This week brings a Christmas card from an occupation soldier in Tokyo. The outer card, a lovely water color, shows a kimono-ed Japanese woman carding wool. The inner card brings greetings for Christmas and the coming year. In English.

Love Comes to Rattlesnake

Word has just come this way of a man who loves stamp collecting as fervently as he hated Mr. Roosevelt. His love for stamps triumphed over the evil in his heart, however, when the Roosevelt memorial issues came out. He had to have them for his collection. He obtained them. But he sent them to Rattlesnake, Hillsborough county, Fla., for cancellation.

News!

If the world seems to be setting back into its same old ruts and your disillusion is beginning to be great about the promised perfection of the post-war, do not yet be of weak faith. An announcement from the Chicago Illinois Hairstylists' guild says there is a new trend in the shaping of eyebrows.

Two Languages

Near the end of the war Alfred Bayless, a staff sergeant in the army air force, was sent to a British school in North Africa to study new developments in radar. There he learned about VHF, translated as Very High Frequency, a great leap over what had previously been regarded as high frequency. American instructors adopted VHF as a standard term and were doing nicely with it until they suddenly encountered the British designation VHFI [Very High Frequency, Indeed]. This proved too much, and American texts now describe the same phenomenon as ultra high frequency.

Tardy Intelligence

A PROBLEM IN REORIENTATION

Camp Breckinridge, Ky., Nov. 20.—I returned a few months ago from Europe and I'll admit I was a little out of touch with the home front's troubles, but I was eager to get into the swing of things and I wanted to learn. I tried, but I'm about to give up.

You see, I was taught that a man was supposed to work and save to get ahead in the world. I was taught that there was no greater feeling than the satisfaction derived from a good day's work well done. I was taught to respect the rights of my fellow men, and, further, that honesty, integrity, and self-initiative were virtues and a prerequisite to success.

But here I am, about to get out of the army and I've lost my ability to earn a living. Try as I may, I can't adjust my thinking so as to permit me to demand 30 per cent more money for less work; to lean on Uncle Sam for my security; to ask some strong-arm expug if I can be permitted to earn a living, or to bow and cower to any pressure group.

You people on the home front have been subjected to it gradually and maybe it was easy to take these steps one at a time, but it's hitting me all at once and I'm ready to admit I just can't do what seems to be required of me. So I contend the army has turned me anti-social and that some provision should be made to take care of fellows like me. What would you suggest?

I saw faces of displaced persons, faces of people who need more than words and kind thoughts. They need food.

Happy is our Christmas, for those of us who returned—but doesn't your conscience hurt a wee bit as you chew your chops and steak? We the rich, export less than 5 per cent of our meat, but Canada exports 40 to 50 per cent. ROY H. REEVES

Under Sec. 6 (6) of the regulations, if the landlord puts the tenant out in order to occupy himself, the landlord must file a written report before renting to others within six months. We find no wording specifically on your case, but we would expect OPA to show less indulgence to an eviction in favor of a member of your family than to one in your favor. MAN MADE RAIN SAVES CENTRAL AMERICAN CROPS

Cost of Bananas Boosted to $700 an Acre

BY STANLEY JOHNSTON

[Tribune correspondent who recently returned from a tour of Central and South America.]

Artificial rain is making the bananas grow in Central America, particularly in Guatemala and Costa Rica.

Forced to abandon millions of dollars' worth of banana plantations along the Atlantic coast because a disease, known as sigatoka, destroyed fruit crops, the United Fruit company began growing bananas in poor, dry soil on the Pacific coast.

With rainfall in the Atlantic area twice that of regions near the Pacific, banana experts adopted overhead irrigation. They erected huge water towers which drop the rain onto the arid land from eight to nine months a year. Rivers draining the mountains have been dammed and the water is pumped into the towers from these reservoirs.

Costs $700 an Acre

The towers revolve like lawn sprinklers and spray bananas a considerable distance away. The cost of banana plantations with this equipment has been estimated at $700 an acre. This heavy investment and upkeep of mechanical equipment increases the cost of producing bananas.

Laborers on banana plantations must be imported from the Caribbean nations because Indians in Central America prefer to work in the mountains where it is cool. Banana workers, too, are paid twice as much as men who labor on the coffee plantations.

In Guatemala alone, United Fruit has an investment of $24,894,580. In the Pacific sector 17,500 acres are devoted to the raising of bananas and in the Atlantic sector 12,500 acres. In the last 10 years, United Fruit has spent $40,626,400 in Guatemala, an average of $5,000,000 a year, as follows: Pay rolls, $32,041,200; fruit purchased from private growers, $9,998,700; purchase of local products, $8,586,500. In Costa Rica the company's expenditures for 1944 were $7,332,058, including wages.

Hospitals and Dispensaries

In addition, United Fruit maintains modern hospitals in Guatemala and Costa Rica and operates dispensaries thruout the cultivated area. The dispensaries supply free medicine to workers and their families. The firm also operates a system of schools, each plantation having its own school. Free medical treatment is given.

Experimentation by United Fruit has brought a new crop to Central America. It is abaca, which goes into rope of the manila type used on naval craft. When the Japs overran the Philippines the United States lost one of its most important sources of supply of hemp and Costa Rica was chosen for experimentation. The experiment paid off and Central America became almost the sole source of supply for rope and cordage used by the United States navy during the war.

The economy of the five Central American republics of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica is tied up in agriculture. The people of these tiny nations must dig the soil for a living.

Poor and Honest

Guatemala has a population of 3,500,000, the largest of any Central American country. More than half of the Guatemalans are Indians, some of whom still live as primitively as the Mayans did before the arrival of the Spanish settlers. The Indian is usually poor and honest. He follows ancient religious customs and has many superstitions. The remainder of the country's inhabitants are of mixed Indian and Spanish descent with a few of pure European descent. Immigration is discouraged. The total area of the republic is 48,290 square miles.

Coffee makes up from 60 to 70 per cent of the nation's exports. Bananas are the second most important item.

El Salvador, with a population of 1,862,980, is the smallest Central American country in area, measuring 13,176 square miles. Almost 80 per cent of the people are of mixed races, principally Indian and white. Less than 20 per cent of the population is Indian. The people are industrious, thrifty and content and have a strong yearning for liberalism. Coffee constitutes 77 per cent of national exports.

Honduras Is Largest

Honduras has a population of 1,150,000 and an area of 59,000 square miles, the largest in Central America. People of mixed blood make up 85 per cent of the population. About nine per cent of the inhabitants are pure blooded Indians. The north coast is populated almost entirely by Negroes who as a rule do not mix with other Hondurans.

Nicaragua, with a population of 1,380,000, is the most sparsely populated of all the Central American countries, having an average density of 20.5 persons a square mile. Its area is 57,915 square miles. Indians and people of mixed blood make up about 70 per cent of the population while about 25 per cent are pure white and 5 per cent are Negroes. A small, wealthy class of land owners operates extensive cattle ranches and coffee plantations. Coffee is the leading export crop.

Costa Rica with an area of 23,000 square miles has a population of only 705,000. The people are predominantly white, descendants mostly of Spaniards from Galicia.

TELL HOW AIDES SOLD HITLER ON TAKING NORWAY

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 6—The worthlessness of international treaties beyond the worthiness of their signers was cited by British Prosecutor Elwyn Jones today as the war crimes trial took up Germany's 1940 invasion of Denmark and Norway. Jones referred to neutrality pledges engineered the preceding year by Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's ace diplomat.

For the first time in the trial of the 20 top Nazis the heat was put under former Grand Admirals Karl Doenitz and Erich Raeder and under Alfred Rosenberg, Russian born head of the Nazi party's foreign office. They were linked with Vidkun Quisling, Norwegian Nazi executed for this relationship.

Quisling was a convenient tool for Raeder in advocating the German occupation of Norwegian sea bases. Doenitz as commander of submarine warfare at the time, helped persuade Hitler to strike northward.

High Command Accused

"This evidence," Jones said, introducing captured German records, "again illustrates the participation of the German high command in the political and diplomatic aspects of this conspiracy to wage aggressive war."

Most of the day's session was devoted to British presentation of documents showing that English diplomats, supported by France and the late President Roosevelt, sent repeated pleas to Hitler not to invade Poland, the incident on Sept. 1, 1939, which prompted the British and French declaration of war against Germany.

Evidence indicated that the German nonaggression pact with Stalin clinched Hitler's decision to wipe out Poland.

Hermann Goering, deputy fuehrer, was denied permission to testify on this point when the prosecution introduced a statement he made last summer to the effect that the British pledge to aid Poland in the event of war delayed hostilities for seven days while Hitler sought to "eliminate British intervention."

Peace Pleas Introduced

The British submitted texts of pleas for peace or negotiations from President Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, French Premier Eduard Daladier, and Pope Pius, which the fuehrer rejected in the three weeks before opening his attack on Poland.

The British also introduced the minutes of the Aug. 12, 1939, meeting, between Hitler and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, in which Mussolini's son-in-law indicated almost childlike surprise at Hitler's announcement that he planned to attack Poland.

Ciano said his country was unprepared for the general European war that would result. Other documents disclosed that Mussolini pleaded with Hitler for an armistice 24 hours after the Germans drove into Poland, but the plea was coldly received by Hitler.

LIMP as a RAG from FATIGUE?

Then read about this sensible, drugless way to guard against that tired feeling due to B Complex deficiency!

It is surprising, and shocking too, how many people go along day after day so tired, so tuckered out most of the time, that they find it difficult to do their work and impossible to enjoy life. It isn't that they are sick. There's nothing organically wrong—just that awful fatigue!

Now, while fatigue may be due to a number of causes, it has been proved that in a surprising number of cases, fatigue is due to a lack of three factors in your daily diet—thiamine, essential for the normal functioning of the nervous system; riboflavin and niacin.

All three are factors in B Complex vitamins. All three are equally important.

The sensible, honest and inexpensive way to guard against B deficiency ... the way to help avoid that constant nagging fatigue ... is to supplement your diet with BEXEL. BEXEL is a remarkable product—an easy-to-take capsule which contains concentrated amounts of thiamine, riboflavin and niacin. If you will take BEXEL over a reasonable period and if, at the same time, you will follow the common sense rules of getting a reasonable amount of sleep, and eating a good diet, then ... well, you'd be amazed how many thousands of people have been helped to joyous vitality and radiant energy by BEXEL.

BEXEL contains no artificial stimulants that let you down. It is the new, modern way to insure against loss of energy and fatigue due to dietary deficiency of B Complex.

Get BEXEL today in your drug store. Or ask your doctor what he thinks of this wonderful preparation. Made by one of America's outstanding laboratories—McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Conn.

983 YOUNGSTERS GROSS $463,489 AT STOCK SHOW

Steers Win $10,638 for Coloradan

BY BEN MARKLAND

Farm boys and girls usually aren't ranked as business tycoons, but the 983 youngsters who exhibited cattle, sheep, and swine in the Chicago Market Fat Stock show will take home an average of $471.50 each to be added to their bank accounts this week.

In the show auctions, concluded yesterday in the stock yards, members of the 4-H and Future Farmer groups sold live stock that brought a total of $463,489.05. The stock auctioned by adult exhibitors grossed more than $331,000, bringing the total value of the animals exhibited during the six-day show to almost $800,000.

Colorado Youth Tops Field

Albert Fritzler, 19, the modest, blond farmer from Sterling, Colo., was the high individual seller among the junior exhibitors. He received $900 for his junior champion Shorthorn steer in yesterday's sale and $9,738 for his champion carload of 15 Shorthorns in Wednesday's auction, making a total of $10,638 that he will take back to his home town bank.

Robert Johnson, the Galva, [Ia.] boy who exhibited the junior grand champion steer, sold the 1,125 pound animal yesterday for $2.25 per pound, a new stock show record. The sale of the blocky Aberdeen-Angus netted Johnson $2,531.25. It was sold to the First National bank of Chicago.

Bulk of the $463,000 plus now resting in the wallets of junior exhibitors came from cattle sales. The 926 steers weeded out of the original steer entry sold for an average of 25 cents a pound, or more than $231,000. The 714 junior steers that survived the weeding brought more than $213,000.

Champion Hog Nets $2,037.

The oustanding sale of yesterday was the transfer of the grand champion hog for $7 per pound. It was the highest price ever paid for a barrow, stock show officials said. The Callahan brothers of Milford, Iroquois county, sold the animal to the First National Bank employes' restaurant. The Chester White barrow weighed 291 pounds and brought $2,037.

The grand champion sheep, a Southdown wether shown by the University of Kentucky, was bought by a Chicago restaurant for $3 a pound, or $273. Wayne Disch, Evansville, Wis., 4-H member, received $199.80 for his champion pen of three Southdown wethers. A Chicago packing house paid 60 cents a pound for Disch's winners.

FASHION REVUE, KRAFT LUNCHEON END 4-H PARLEY

Closing sessions of the 24th national 4-H congress yesterday featured a fashion revue in the Eighth st. theater, where 42 state winners modeled outfits which had won them trips to the congress as awards of the American Viscose corp.

The final event was a luncheon in the Crystal ballroom of the Stevens hotel with J. L. Kraft, chairman of the board of Kraft Foods company, as host. In an address, Kraft emphasized the necessity of keeping spiritual growth in pace with intellectual growth for living in today's world. He said the choice now lay between making this the terrible age of the atomic bomb or the wonderful age of atomic energy.

Next year's congress, the 25th anniversary event, will be held Dec. 1-6. This year, 1,200 delegates attended, and there were 27 young people from outside the country. They included 18 Chinese, who are in the United States to study 4-H clubs and other methods of extension teaching.

Judge Charles S. Dougherty in Felony court yesterday placed Joseph Fiumefreddo, 25, of 514 Hobbie st., on probation for a year on a charge of assaulting another man.

TOMMY MANVILLE'S INTENDED NO. 8 KEEPS HIM WAITING AT GATE

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Despite a late train and a misunderstanding, Tommy Manville and his eighth bride-to-be, British-born Georgina Campbell, 27, met today in Grand Central station.

"I guess she stood me up," said Tommy after he met three trains without success. But a few minutes later Miss Campbell, who came from California, rushed into his arms with an explanation that she had arrived on a different train than Tommy expected and had been delayed.

Tommy's pre-marital statement had a familiar ring: "She is more talented than all of my other wives. This is my last marriage. I am getting very old very quickly and I am definitely broke."

He obtained the wedding license Tuesday in Greenwich, Conn., but cannot use it until Sunday because of Connecticut's five day waiting period.

JUDGE PONDERS DAMAGES FROM SANITARY BOARD

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday took under advisement the accounting phase of a patent infringement suit brought against the sanitary district by Activated Sludge, Inc. The judge indicated, after oral arguments from attorneys for both sides, that he would rule in mid-January. The court has ruled that a patent infringement existed in connection with the artificial purification of sewage, but no determination has been made of damages, for which unofficial estimates have gone as high as $7,500,000.

G.M. PROPOSES A 13½c RAISE; CIO REFUSES IT

Negotiations to Continue; Hopes Are High

eral Motors, while sending none of its own representatives to appear before the committee, made available its own negotiation briefs and other data.

The company's offer to the striking auto workers paralleled that it also made to its employes in eastern plants who are members of the CIO United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers.

25,000 Workers Involved

That union's 25,000 workers in G. M. Plants in Dayton, Warren, and Yellow Springs, O., and in Rochester and Long Island City, N. Y., were voting tonight on an offer to increase their wages 13½ cents an hour.

Neil Brant, international representative of the electrical union, announced in Washington, D. C., that the company had proffered the raise "as the best offer we are willing to make." The union previously had rejected a 10 per cent increase. The new offer was said to amount to approximately 15 per cent, on the basis of electrical union's average wage, which is lower than that of the auto workers.

A letter to the union from H. W. Anderson, G. M. personnel vice president, which Brant made public, said that plant managers are ready to negotiate local wage agreements fixing a minimum hiring rate of 80 cents an hour for both men and women and that this rate would increase to 90 cents in a period of about 30 days in most plants.

Makes No Recommendations

Brant said the offer would be submitted to local electrical unions without recommendation. He declined to anticipate the outcome of the voting.

The electrical workers are planning a strike vote Dec. 13 in all G. M. plants with which they have contracts and in General Electric and Westinghouse plants. Altogether approximately 270,000 workers are involved.

In announcing the developments Brant frequently referred to the CIO's "big three"—the Electrical Workers, the Auto Workers, and the Steel Workers—and declared they are acting together. He said this meant they were keeping each other informed as to wage developments. He disclosed that the G. M. offer to the electrical workers had been considered jointly by the "big three" at a meeting in Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

Altho a 30 per cent increase has been demanded by both the UAW, which is on strike, and the Steel Workers, who have voted to strike, the Electrical Workers are seeking an increase of 25 per cent, which amounts to an extra 25 cents an hour, or $2 a day. The company's offer is about half the raise the electrical union demanded.

TRIPLE KILLING LAID TO DISPUTE OVER FARM WORK

Logansport, Ind., Dec. 6 [Special]—Ill feeling over farm work was believed by authorities to have caused Frank Richardson, 32, to kill his employer, Albert Ault, 85, and the farmer's daughter, Ellen Ault, 30, then kill himself on the Ault farm near here.

A truck driver found the bullet pierced bodies today. The shooting apparently took place last night. It was believed Richardson first shot Ault, then shot Ellen as she fled thru a bedroom window. Her body lay in a ditch 100 feet from the house. Bodies of the two men were in the house. A revolver was by Richardson's side.

Richardson, a tenant on the Ault farm, lived with his wife and three children a quarter of a mile from the Ault house. His widow, Lela, said he left home late yesterday saying he was going hunting. Sheriff Harold Smith said he was told Richardson and Ault had quarreled frequently.

JOHNS-MANVILLE FACES LOSS AT PLANT IN STRIKE

The $14,500,000 Johns-Manville Products corporation plant at Waukegan, which has been closed by a strike since Nov. 20 by local 60 of the International Chemical Workers' union [AFL], faced inestimable damage yesterday because 22 maintenance men, who had been on the job since the strike started, did not report for work.

A strike which started Oct. 19 at the American Forge division of the American Brake Shoe company, 2621 S. Hoyne av., ended yesterday when the company and local 453 of the CIO auto workers' union reached a settlement of their dispute. Capt. George Barnes, head of the police labor detail, said the 400 strikers returned to work.

Thirteen other strikes in Chicago plants continued yesterday and kept 3,849 employes from their jobs.

Employes of the Illinois manufacturing division plants of the Timken Axle company at Waukegan and North Chicago yesterday voted 146 to 10 in a national labor relations board election to authorize a strike to enforce demands of a $2 a day wage increase. They are members of local No. 1,252 of the United Steel Workers of America [CIO].

"...If thine Enemy Hunger, Feed Him..."

AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE

A Message to Men and Women of Goodwill

Fellow Americans, in our efforts this winter to feed the hungry in many war-stricken lands, let us not neglect the German children and all those who have been our enemies. They also must live if there is to be a new birth of hope and peace among the people of Europe. Not that we suggest any preference for Germans; all hungry people must be given food. But let the distribution of our help be impartial, according to need, to friend and foe alike.

In an unprecedented way, we Americans hold in our hands the fate of the German children. They and the children of Austria are in a desperate plight. Unless there is an outpouring of moral support for their relief and unless food is shipped from the United States, they will surely die in countless numbers as Central Europe sinks into starvation-driven chaos.

The official daily ration in Germany today is 1550 calories. This is about one half of a normal diet and means certain death if continued throughout the winter. Only the United States has the power and supplies to act in this crisis. Yet little or nothing is being done. Our Armed Forces and our Government seem to be awaiting a mandate from the American people to ship food into the shattered, foodless cities where millions are homeless and unemployed. No other power or agency can avert famine, especially in Germany, this winter. UNRRA is barred from aiding German nationals due to restrictions within its charter. There is no German government to beg or borrow funds with which to buy food abroad.

With great humility, we Quakers undertake to speak for the crushed and silent masses in Germany. We believe that millions of Americans share our conviction that they must be fed insofar as it is within our power. This is no humanitarian impulse merely. We speak under a compelling sense of the power of love to heal our wounded universe. For in this world of ours there are certain moral laws which operate irresistibly whether we acknowledge them or not. If we Americans want a rightly ordered world, we must put in operation the methods that will build it. The feeding of starving children is a sure step toward peace. We must try to see their human faces and feel for them in their agony. We must realize clearly that starvation produces abnormality in character and that almost more important than food is the touch of a kindly human spirit with its creative power of hope and faith and courage.

We know whereof we speak. We have fed the children of many nationalities under many tragic circumstances. We have seen the hearts of embittered people grow warm and tender in response to such ministry. The fertilizing seeds of human friendship expressed in deeds of kindness are what Europe needs to remove violence, hate and the spirit of vengeance. This is both sound statesmanship and the essence of our Christian faith.

To make this possible there must come in America a burst of powerful sentiment in favor of inducing our Government to see that food is brought to the children of Central Europe, and with it those deeper springs of life which tend to restore hope and faith in men.

Specifically we urge that our Government mobilize foodstocks, transport and funds to raise the level of rations to at least 2000 calories daily in Germany, Austria and the other countries unable to procure food for themselves.

We urge the American Armed Forces to accept the assistance of American voluntary relief agencies in the specialized care of children, expectant and nursing mothers and the aged, or in whatever services they can render effectively.

Finally, we urge the speedy resumption of mail and parcel post service to Central Europe in order that persons in the United States can supplement rations by sending food and clothing to their friends and relatives.

These are essential steps to avert famine and wholesale death in Central Europe this winter. We encourage our fellow Americans to join us in supporting these recommendations. We urge you to press for action through your church, clubs and civic organizations. Let us make a beginning in the great task of building a world at peace and fit for children to live in.

HOTEL KILLING CONFESSION BY COOK ADMITTED

Defense Loses Battle to Bar Story of Fight

BY GEORGE WRIGHT

Chief Justice Harold G. Ward in Criminal court late yesterday admitted into evidence a confession by Donald Jay Cook that he killed his chum, Morton Stein, in a fight May 10 in their Stevens hotel room over division of their burglary loot.

Defense attorneys had sought to block the introduction of the statement on the ground it was obtained by duress. Judge Ward ruled the confession admissible after Cook and other witnesses had testified outside the presence of the jury of nine women and three men.

Confession to be Read Today

Asst. State's Atty. Richard Austin said the confession would be read to the jury this morning. Cook was called to the witness stand by his attorneys, Thomas Cavanagh, Michael Brodkin, and George Bieber.

Wearing dark brown slacks and a gray checked sports coat with matching tie, Cook sat hunched over the witness rail as he answered questions put to him by his attorneys. He seemed sulky and petulant as he told how he had been awakened at midnight after his arrest in New Orleans, La., and asked to make a statement.

Cook testified Lt. Phil Breitzke told him he did not have to make a statement, but that it would be better for him to get it over with. The youth said he then admitted the slaying and said he fought in self-defense.

Given Long Detector Test

Later Cook said he was taken to Chicago, where he was given a lie detector test.

"I never consented to the test," he said, "but they put me on the machine for three and a half hours."

"I asked what they wanted me to say," Cook continued. "The operator suggested where I should make some changes, so I changed it for them. I didn't want to sit all day."

To counter Cook's testimony Austin called Policeman John Reid, assigned to the crime detection laboratory, who gave the test to Cook.

Policeman Tells Confession

Reid said he gave Cook two 20 minute tests and that the youth told him the details of the fight in the hotel room over dividing the burglary loot.

"Cook said he and Stein were arguing about the proceeds," Reid testified, "and that he [Cook] told Stein he was entitled to $30 to $40 —more than half of the proceeds.

"Cook said that Stein told him he wouldn't give him any money until they committed another burglary he [Stein] had in mind."

"Cook said he kept getting hotter under the collar and that he finally grabbed the blackjack and hit Stein several times until the blackjack broke."

Reid testified that Cook said he then grabbed the bed lamp and hit Stein a glancing blow.

"'He [Stein] just wouldn't go down,'" Reid quoted Cook as telling him. "'I finally ran around the bed, grabbed the knife, and stabbed him.'"

VOTE TO INDICT EVANSTON BOY ON RAPE COUNT

The grand jury was reported yesterday to have voted two true bills on rape and sex charges against Howard G. Stiles Jr., 16, of 2326 Brown av., Evanston.

One of the true bills charges Stiles with the rape of an Evanston girl, 8, Aug. 24 and the other with indecent liberties and the attempted rape of an Evanston girl, 10, Sept. 16. Bond for Stiles was set at $10,000 by the grand jurors.

Stiles at present is at liberty on a $2,000 bond fixed by Judge Frank H. Bicek in Juvenile court.

Grand jury consideration of the charges against Stiles was ordered by Judge Bicek after he turned down a request of the state's attorney's office that Stiles was mentally ill and should be committed to an institution or the Illinois State Training School for Boys.

SWISS HINT U. S. WANTS TO LEARN WATCH SECRETS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 6—The American note demanding of Switzerland a partial ban on the exporting of watches to the United States really has a broader aspect, according to the organ of the watchmakers' industrial district in Chaux de Fonds. It charges that the demand is aimed at inducing the Swiss to export watchmaking machinery, rather than watches, to America in the hope that American manufacturers can learn the secrets of Swiss watchmaking.

Until now the Swiss have been adamant in refusing to communicate their manufacturing secrets to any one. However, with Switzerland completely deprived of raw materials, it is important that it develop a greater export business. The paper admits that this country was greatly benefited by the war thru the increase in watch exports.

Switzerland is in need of many types of American goods which it would finance thru its export of watches, and the newspaper points out that America itself will be unable to fulfill its watch requirements from domestic manufacturers before the summer of 1946.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Swiss watch manufacturers have no connection with the Waltham Watch company, Walter W. Cenerazzo of Boston, Mass., national president of the Independent American Watch Workers' union, said yesterday. His information corrects a Tribune dispatch from Geneva, Switzerland, which said erroneously that "several Swiss firms operating partly with American capital are producing in the United States, such as Longines, Cymax, and Waltham." The American Watch Workers' union has announced it will petition congress to restrict Swiss watch imports.

OUR BIGGEST TRAVEL JOB

is ahead

. . . GETTING THE FIGHTING MEN HOME

DURING December about 530,000 veterans, homeward bound from overseas, will arrive on the Pacific Coast; another 490,000 will arrive on the Atlantic Coast—a total of more than a million service men returning in one month! All of them are eager to get home—all of us are eager to do what we can to help.

The railroads have one thought in mind—to give returning veterans the very best service they can with the cars and engines that are available.

This is the situation:

Three-fourths of all the sleeping car space in the country is assigned to movements of our fighting men. Coaches, too, have been taken from regular train service—more and more of them—including 368 additional withdrawn from western trains early this month.

As you know, no new passenger cars could be built during the war. Even the 1200 government troop sleepers, ordered last spring, have not been delivered because of labor difficulties.

Only a small portion of our passenger equipment is available now for necessary civilian travel, to say nothing of the added demands of the Holiday Season.

Inconveniences, discomforts and delays are unavoidable under these circumstances. No one regrets this more than the railroads. The problem is particularly acute on the Pacific Coast where nine-tenths of the returning veterans must make long journeys to reach their homes.

This then is the situation for the next two or three months. We know you understand and will be patient, just as you were during the war years. For nothing is so important to America as her fighting sons.

The returning of these men—a million a month—is the final phase of the railroads' war job. It is the most difficult. But when it is behind us, normal service will be quickly restored, and plans that already are far advanced for many improvements and innovations in railway travel will become realities.

But first we must finish our war job!

A HEEL AND A JUG USED IN EFFORT TO DOOM NISCHT

State Begins Building Its Case Bit by Bit

BY FRANK CIPRIANI

A black heel from a woman's shoe and a reconstructed one gallon glass jug were introduced in evidence yesterday before Judge Charles E. Byrne and a jury in the Criminal court as strands in a web of circumstantial evidence which the state hopes to weave around Joseph Nischt, husky young janitor, and send him to the electric chair for the alleged furnace murder of Mrs. Rose Michaelis.

These articles and others yet to be offered, including one or two hairpins, a housekey, and paper bag, all possessions of Mrs. Michaelis, were found at the rear of 6855 Clyde av., where Mrs. Michaelis lived and Nischt was janitor, after her mysterious disappearance on the night of Feb. 28 last.

Charge He Seized Her

It was there, the state alleges, that Nischt seized and beat Mrs. Michaelis, dragged her unconscious to the furnace room at 6855 Clyde, and then shoved her body into the roaring firebox. The heel, jug, and other articles all were dropped by Mrs. Michaelis during the attack, according to the state's theory. Her body has never been found.

The articles and other factors, including Mrs. Michaelis' absence to date, will all figure in the prosecution's attempt to establish the corpus delicti, or fact of her death by criminal agency. Above and beyond all these, however, will be Nischt's reputed and repudiated confessions.

Without them, the state's case would collapse and a directed verdict of not guilty would result, State's Atty. Tuohy candidly told Judge Byrne earlier in the day when James M. Burke and Robert E. Romano lost a fight to ban any mention of the confessions by Asst. State's Atty. Blair L. Varnes in his opening statement.

Battle Lines Drawn

The opening statements by Varnes and Burke drew the battle lines. Varnes declared the state would show by the hairpins, heel, and other items that Mrs. Michaelis had been attacked.

Burke charged that Nischt's reputed confessions were extracted by beatings, hanging by the ankles, lack of sleep, and persistent questioning.

The defense lawyer also asserted he would show that for several months after Feb. 28 police were still looking for Mrs. Michaelis alive.

First witnesses were Mrs. Bella Cohen, 6855 Clyde av., a neighbor of Mrs. Michaelis, and Mrs. Michaelis' five sisters and brother-in-law, Mrs. Jean Van Vliet, Blanche, Mary, Minnie, and Sally Lasser, and John Van Vliet, all of 9035 Exchange av. The state drew from them the information that Mrs. Michaelis was well and happy and had no reason to leave home voluntarily. Burke brought out that she had been in a sanitarium for two months in 1926.

Today Mrs. Michaelis' husband, Milton, will testify and is expected to tell how he confronted Nischt and how Nischt, as quoted by Prosecutor Varnes, confessed, "I'm sorry, I don't know why I did it."

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Elmer Whittaker, Taunton, Mass.]

THE QUESTION

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Bernie Mailts, radio announcer, 1900 N. Washtenaw av.—I know a little model by the name of Lois Griffin who should be in the movies so every one could feast their eyes on her. She has eyes like Paulette Goddard, legs of Lana Turner, smiles as sweet as Jane Allyson, hair like Ginger Rogers, and a voice like Alice Faye.

Vernar I. Martinson, 715 Barry av.—There are too many beautiful women to make a choice. But when I consider all of them I'll take Ingrid Bergman. I saw her in Germany when she was entertaining service men. In addition to being good looking she was a good sport and was grand to the fellows.

Joseph Bianco, cook, 2108 Chicago av.—My wife, to me, is the most beautiful woman in the world. I wouldn't have married her if I didn't think so. Maybe love is blind but she's not hard to look at and she never nags. That's one of the things that makes her beautiful. I can't stand a nagging woman.

Coxswain Walter Jahn, Elgin—I could think of a million of them if I weren't married. For instance I liked the little chocolate colored girl I met on Guam. I like the way her little toes curled. But to keep peace with the girl I love, I'd better say that I consider my wife to be the most beautiful woman in the world.

Frank Holden, Elgin—They all look good to me, especially in Chicago. I think a lot of employers put beautiful cashiers in cages just to befuddle the customers and the gorgeous waitresses divert attention from the food. To choose who is most beautiful is like saying which drop of water tastes best.

Ensign Joseph K. Cook, Washington, D. C.—I could say my girl friend but she wouldn't believe it. So for the benefit of every one else I'll say my girl friend is the most beautiful girl in the world. She has poise, good looks, smiling brown eyes, and brown hair. I can't wait until I see her again.

RINGS WORTH $250 STOLEN

The theft of two rings, valued at $250, from her flat was reported to police yesterday by Mrs. Pat Murray, 5017 Drexel blvd.

ONLY MARRIED VETS GET HOMES IN CHA COLONY

With $500,000 in hand to establish temporary housing colonies for war veterans, the Chicago housing authority announced yesterday that it would start Monday to select tenants for the 500 houses to be set up immediately.

Only Chicago war veterans who are married will be considered and each application will be studied on the basis of emergency. The CHA said one emergency situation is that of a family scattered by lack of a home. Families with shelter at present will not be considered just because they wish to move.

OPA Will Set Rents

All applications will be handled thru the housing center at 39 S. La Salle st. Rentals are still to be fixed by the OPA, but the CHA thought the scale would be $40 to $45 a month, which was the rate for demountable houses at near-by war plants. They will be rented unfurnished, with light and water free, the CHA plans. The tenants will furnish fuel.

A check for $500,000, half the sum authorized by the council to be lent to CHA for housing veterans, was delivered yesterday by City Treasurer Drymalski to Edgar L. Schnadig and Paul Freedman, CHA treasurer and controler, respectively. The loan is expected to be repaid out of rentals plus salvage of the houses obtained from the government.

County Leases Site for $1

The CHA disclosed that the 19 acres now occupied by Camp Sauganash in the forest preserve at Foster and Tripp avs. would be the first developed, because sewer and water connections can be made quickly. The site was leased to CHA by the county board for two years at $1 a year.

Other units of the first 500 habitations, which are to come from Kingsford Heights, near La Porte, Ind., and from the Seneca ship yards, will be placed on a site obtained from the park district at 79th st. and Kostner av.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Dec. 7—Anniversary of Pearl Harbor

At dawn four years ago today Japanese planes darted in from the sea over the island of Oahu, Hawaii. Their goal was the great United States naval base at Pearl Harbor.

They struck at the navy flying boat base and zoomed over the air fields. Their bullets riddled the navy and army planes which were helplessly lined up in neat rows on the fields. Their bombs crashed on runways, hangars and repair shops.

Then the marauders turned their full fury on the water areas surrounding Ford Island, where battleships, cruisers, destroyers and auxiliary craft were tied up. Torpedo planes, bombers and fighters roared over the fleet. American anti-aircraft guns went into action late.

The great ships floundered helplessly as the Jap bombs tore into them. The 32,600 ton battleship Arizona blew up with a fearful roar. The 29,000 ton Oklahoma capsized and sank.

After the raiders had streaked away, and after the stunned defenders had had an opportunity to survey the damage, the full extent of the disaster began to dawn. Forty-six hundred men were dead, wounded or missing.

Besides the Arizona and the Oklahoma, four battleships as well as two destroyers and a floating dry dock had been sunk. Damaged but still afloat were three battleships, three light cruisers, a destroyer, a seaplane tender, a repair ship and a minelayer. The Japanese, according to their own report, lost 29 planes.

Pearl Harbor plunged the United States and Japan into a war which ended last Aug. 14 with an unqualified victory for America and her allies.

STASSEN AGAIN HEADS RELIGIOUS EDUCATION BODY

Former Gov. Stassen of Minnesota yesterday resumed his duties as president of the International Council of Religious Education. He had been on war leave for the last 30 months. He met the Rev. Dr. Roy G. Ross, executive director; the heads of the council's 19 departments; the staff, and members associated with it during his absence. Stassen reviewed the council's work for the last year and discussed plans for its future activities, particularly for 1947, when the quadrennial convention will take place. The convention will put emphasis on work of lay members.

Council Group Ends Study of 1946 Operating Fund

The council finance committee yesterday completed its first review of the city controler's estimate of corporate, or operating fund, expenditures for 1946. Today it will review the water fund estimate of expenses to be made from water taxes. On Monday the committee will start day and night sessions and call in all city department heads to question them about their requests for funds for next year.

Sally Requests Warm Coats for 3 Persons

[Sally Joy Brown activities are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

From the north side comes a request from Mrs. N., widowed mother of a 9 year old son, who has lost time from her job because of a recent illness. Doctor bills in addition to her regular household expenses have caused her deep concern, and she is eager to start earning again. However, she lacks and cannot afford a winter coat and a warm dress, size 20, and fears to risk the progress she has made by wearing her light spring coat.

We hope that one of our readers has a discarded, warm overcoat size 42 and a hat size 7 for Mr. M., a middle aged man, just recovering from pneumonia, who hopes to be able to be up and about in a few days looking for work. He has been warned against the danger of relapse and cannot venture out in his light jacket, the only wrap he possesses.

From a Wisconsin town comes the request of Mr. C., veteran of World War I., a former salesman, who has been in and out of hospitals for the last four years in an effort to recover from a severe arthritic condition. An improvement makes him hopeful of venturing again into the business world, and a good appearance will help him make contacts. He wears size 38 tall, and is particularly in need of a suit and warm overcoat. The name and address will be supplied upon request.

The actual bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 spades	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	Pass
6 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead, king of clubs.

It is one of the cardinal principles of defensive play that the attack of dummy's long suits should be avoided. The old adage about leading thru strength that has come to us from the days of whist, has caused a great deal of confusion. While it may be sound tactics in many cases to lead thru short strength, it is losing bridge in the long run to lead thru long strength. Beware of concentrating on the play of a suit in which dummy holds five cards. Even so apparently innocuous a holding as dummy's club suit in today's hand may be loaded with dynamite.

South's bid of two spades is proper, inasmuch as he is within a trick of game in his own hand, and holds four honor tricks. West could gain nothing by bidding and North responded normally with three diamonds. South rebid the spades and North went on to four of the suit. South's jump to slam is questionable in the extreme since he has no assurance that North can take care of all the diamond losers. And it is a certainty that a club trick must be lost inasmuch as partner had the opportunity to show the ace of that suit and failed to do so.

West opened the king of clubs and East followed with the seven. That was a pretty good sized card to West's way of thinking so he continued with the ace and thus presented declarer with the slam. The second club was ruffed and declarer went about setting up dummy's fifth club. He cashed the ace of hearts and then entered dummy by trumping the king of hearts. A club was led and ruffed. The trumps were drawn. Dummy was reentered with the king of diamonds and the nine of clubs ruffed in the closed hand. This established the 10 as a winner upon which a losing diamond was shed.

Note that any lead other than a club at trick two will make it impossible to make the hand, inasmuch as dummy will be one entry short to establish and cash the fifth club. West should have recognized that the seven of clubs was the lowest one that partner had and was therefore not suggesting the continuation of the suit. West feared that the diamond suit in dummy might provide a discard for a losing club if declarer had another of that suit. This was not sound reasoning. South could hardly have contracted for a slam on this line of bidding if he held two losing clubs. West should therefore have feared the establishment of the lone club for a diamond discard since it was much more likely that declarer had losing diamonds which he hoped his partner could take care of.

The usual weekly quiz will appear tomorrow.

Women's Traffic Club to Have Annual Dinner

Service Center Girl Chairman Will Be Feted

The women's advisory council of the Chicago service men's centers will entertain at luncheon at 1 p. m. tomorrow in the Woman's Athletic club for 11 young women who have served as chairmen of the Service Men's Center Girls clubs.

The girls themselves elect the chairmen, one of whom is in charge of each night of the week at both the Washington street center and the center in the old Auditorium hotel. These chairmen constitute the girls' council.

Among the board members to be present at the luncheon are the chairman, Mrs. Sartelle Brooks; Mrs. Byrd E. Henderson, Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Miss Marie Plamondon, Mrs. William Waller Jr., and Mrs. Edward J. Kelly.

The 11 young women who serve as chairmen and members of the girls' council are the Misses Mardee Bluder, June Betty Ruzicka, Helen Corcoran, Edith Sush, Sally Wiss, Rosemary Wyatt, Bernice Robinson, Mildred Silverman, Mary Lannon, Bess Ernest, and Mary Leona Higgins.

The centers will benefit from a dance and card party which the Chicago chapter of the National Executive Housekeepers association will give Dec. 15 in the Drake hotel. The party is being given to help the centers to provide Christmas dinners for service men.

Thru the Looking Glass

Pretty close to the ultimate in luxury gifts is a gleaming white box of the kind of bath exquisites that even a princess would sigh over. For years we've found these irresistible, not only because of their quality of fragrance and the sheer enchantment of the scent that permeates every item, but because of their packaging, the richest, simplest imaginable but at the same time just about the most distinguished to be found anywhere.

The white box has the most restrained magenta banding and nothing more embellishing it than the name of the products in an aristocratic kind of script in the same magenta. Then each of the items—five in all—is exquisitely done in the same stunning color scheme.

There are two cakes of fine soap, for example, lavishly fragranced and in the nice big luxurious bath size. Time was when each of these would be wrapped in white satin. Now, on account of the state of the world, they're swathed in white rayon, each embellished with a handsome crest, and they're the most regally wrapped cakes of soap you ever saw!

Flanking these in the bath chest are handsome bottles of toilet essence, a wonderful after-bath refreshant and scenting agent, and of bath oil, so lush that only a few drops will perfume and soften a whole tubful of water. Then there is bath powder, very velvety and fine, with an enormous wool puff. As a final touch of elegance for the lady who loves a luscious bath and beautifully scented possessions, there is a sachet pillow in white bridal satin!

The sachet, like all the other things, is scented with the bouquet of flowers, super-concentrated so that it lasts for months.

This box is priced at $12.50. And there is a tax, too. But to buy these handsome things singly would cost you more!

Santa Legend Is Problem to Some Parents

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

After quoting recently the psychiatrist, who painted in shocking colors the devastating effect [he believed] on children's minds and characters of the Santa Claus myth, I decided to discuss some angles of this belief, which sounds very solemn in talking about Santa Claus!

Little old, jolly old fellow, working in his cozy shop at his own north pole, dashing around the deep blue, star spangled winter sky, cracking his whip over tiny, prancing reindeer decked with the most musical sleighbells that ever were, doing the absolutely impossible!

Santa Claus! Ineffable delight of a child's heart. Could you quite stand the ecstasy of the night before Christmas when you were a child? I couldn't. Why he's as real as real.

And yet, he isn't. And that's why, altho he'd be the last person in the world to wish it, he causes some mothers a lot of worry.

Because he's not real, he's made a "moral issue" of by some grown-ups, just as fairies are made a moral issue of. They say it's lying to talk about Santa Claus as if he were real.

Others toss morals to the wind and not only say to their children that there is a flesh and blood Santa Claus, but go to all lengths to fix and prolong the belief, thinking that Christmas would lose interest for their children without Santa.

In addition he's used as a bribe and a threat: "Santa will give you this if you're a good little girl." "Santa won't leave you any presents if you're a bad little boy."

Really, none of this is right.

In between these two extremes lies, I believe, a way of solving the Santa Claus problem. How horrible! Calling even Santa a problem! But he is that to some parents, either from the beginning or later when childish but astute practical and intelligent questions are put, such as: "But how can he get all the children in the world's presents in his sleigh?" and "But we haven't any chimney"; down to the tense moment when round eyes look straight into yours and ask, "Mommie, is there a Santa Claus?" In one of these three ways he is a problem to many fathers and mothers.

A VOLUNTARY LETTER—TYPICAL OF A GREAT STACK WE'VE RECEIVED FROM SERVICE MEN AND WOMEN

Manila, Philippines
September 15, 1945
Dear
I am recently liberated prisoner of war, and I am taking advantage of the first opportunity I've had to write to you.
After months and years on a diet of rice and weeds, we finally received some food parcels from the Red Cross. Included were many old, familiar products, and one new one, called Nescafé.
Soluble coffee, eh? Well, we'd all had the old-fashioned soluble coffee products—stuff that didn't taste or even smell like coffee at all. Some of the fellows gave away their Nescafé, or traded it for almost nothing.
Then someone opened a can!
As the aroma pervaded the barracks, you can imagine the effect it created. Cans by the score were opened on the spot, and the clank of spoons stirring in canteen cups was almost deafening. Nescafé had two thousand new customers!
In succeeding years, other Red Cross parcels brought other brands of soluble coffee. But nearly all of us agreed: none compared with Nescafé. There's a taste sensation there that just defies description.
Now, we're wondering what's ahead of us, back in the States. Wondering what life will be like in the new America. And, not least of all — whether we can buy Nescafé at the corner store!
Yours sincerely,

Party Planned for Hinsdale's Young People

BY JUDITH CASS

YOUNG people of the Hinsdale area have a gay party to which to look forward Christmas night, a supper-dance to be given by 30 families to welcome home sons and daughters from schools or from the service. The party will be given in the Hinsdale Community house, and invitations will go in the mail this week-end. Each family will be limited to 10 guests.

Altho only 10 families were included when the idea germinated over a cup of tea in a Hinsdale home the other day, the party grew by leaps and bounds. Some of those who will be hosts for the evening include the Paul Butlers, the Philip R. Clarkes, the Marshall Keigs, the James S. Knowlsons, the Dell L. Kroehlers, Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Brooks, the William Clancys, the Merwin Armstrongs, the William E. Ferrens, Mrs. John Hasbrook, and Mrs. William C. Walker.

Others are the John G. Albrights, the H. L. Buehlers, Mrs. Philip S. Dickinson, the Hugh G. Dugans, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Collins, the Dewey Fagerburgs, the Henry B. Freemans, the Courtney D. Freemans, the George M. Jacksons, Lt. and Mrs. William L. Singer, the Leland G. Taylors, the Lester B. Manns, the Elliott McIntyres, Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Foss, the Lyell H. Ritchies, the William C. Taylors, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Harris, the John A. MacElwains, and the Harry L. Maxwells. A stag line of at least 25 returned veterans is expected.

Other Christmas Parties

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Ferguson Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Hill have reserved the Onwentsia club for a dinner-dance Dec. 29 for their daughters, Miss Virginia Ferguson and Miss Joan Hill. The young women, who were classmates last year at Ferry hall, probably will be on next season's debut list. Miss Ferguson now attends Connecticut college and Miss Hill Lake Forest college. Also present at their party will be Miss Hill's younger sister, Carol, who has arrived at home for the holidays from the San Luis school in Colorado Springs, Colo. The school was closed earlier than usual because o' a flu epidemic.

Filling up whatever small chinks of time remain between debut parties are a number of small teas, luncheons, and dinners to be given for the buds by friends of their families. Before Miss Josephine Esch's debut dance Dec. 28 in the Winnetka Woman's club, Mr. and Mrs. Dain D. Fuller will give a dinner in the Indian Hill club for Miss Bleecker Burnett. The Fullers, former Winnetkans, now live in Cleveland, O., but will return to Chicago for the holidays. Miss Burnett also will be the special guest at a hockey party which the John G. Searles and the Edwin S. Fords will give New Year's night.

The Gordon Shorneys are planning a small dinner and dance for Miss Kay Woodruff Dec. 22 in a downtown hotel. The Chesser Campbells will entertain at supper Dec. 30 for Miss Rosanna Welsh, and that same day some of Miss Sally Craft's friends will be invited to cocktails in Kenilworth by Mr. and Mrs. Ward Pearl. Also on the calendar are Mrs. Malcolm Boyle's luncheon Dec. 20 for Miss Elizabeth Ann Stoll and Mrs. Otis William Bynum's small tea Jan. 2 for Miss Betsy Shanklin, who will be here for the holidays from her home in Syracuse, N. Y.

Wedding News

Two pretty debutantes of the season, Miss Joan and Miss Janet Bennett, will have the roles of bridesmaids today when they join their older sister's other attendants to walk down the aisle of St. Chrysostom's church at 4:30 p. m. The bride is Miss Mary Elizabeth Bennett, second daughter of James Ewing Bennett. Waiting at the altar will be Lt. [j. g.] Philip F. W. Peck Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Peck of Lake Forest. The Rev. Dudley Stark will read the ceremony, and a reception will follow in Mr. Bennett's Wellington av. residence. In the receiving line will be the bride's older sister, Mrs. Thomas B. Satterwhite, who has come from Washington, D. C.

Another sister, Miss Ruth Ann Bennett, will be maid of honor, and the other bridesmaids are Mrs. Walter J. Taylor and Miss Barbara McClurg. Stewart Peck will be his brother's best man, and nine good friends, including Henry Preston, will serve as ushers. Lt. Peck and his bride, who designed the stunning wedding gown she will wear, will live temporarily in Miami, Fla.

Industry Chiefs See Test Tube Styles Paraded

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—America's big business men had ringside seats today at the world premiere of fashions of the future—test tube styles straight from the laboratories of industry.

A fashion show was a departure from the Congress of American Industry, in session here this week, but the assembled business leaders applauded lustily as beautiful models drifted by, attired in glamorous costumes made of everything from coal to sea brine.

There was a sheer and lovely hostess gown fashioned of fortisan, a fabric developed during the war for use in flare parachutes, barrage balloon cloth, and such. Said to be one of the strongest fabrics ever made, it appeared in a garment that seemed as fragile as cobwebs.

Koroseal, used during the war for wire and cable insulation, sleeping bags, and tents, made its civilian bow in mother-daughter raincoats and a rain suit, all streamlined in style, functional in design.

A nylon evening gown trimmed in gold embroidery was shown, worn with a headdress of nylon bristles and lucite sandals.

One of the newest fabrics was an acetate vinyon matelasse, with permanent blisters in the cloth, used in a super-glamorous evening gown.

Another outfit in the parade of man-made fabrics was a suit of teca and mohair, a material developed during the war, which looks like wool, is resistant to mildew and shrinkage, and does not wrinkle. With the suit was shown a bag of black vinylite, which looks like patent leather but is made from limestone, natural gas, coal, and water.

As a contrast to the styles of tomorrow, some fashions of the gay '90s also were shown, with the models attired in old-fashioned wool, cotton, and silk.

Holiday Time Brings Showing of Festive Bags

BY REA SEEGER

Showings of evening bags shine with more effulgence around Christmas than at any other time of the year. Gift bags are out now, in all sizes, shapes, and materials. The beaded and sequined ones blaze like fire, of course. This is the one time you can find emerald green, deep blue, scarlet, copper, silver, gold, pink, pale blue, yellow, and white sequined models at their very brightest and most colorful.

Neat envelopes, about six by ten, are the most practical. Those of multicolored beads and sequins go with everything—dinner, cocktail, or gala evening gowns, in every material and of every color and color combination.

Fabulously beautiful bags with jeweled frames and clasps are so precious that no woman would even dream of keeping one anywhere except tucked securely under her elbow. The Hobé designed bags are an example of this opulence. Filigree gold or silver frames are beautifully set with semi-precious jewels, in a rainbow effect of colors. Dramatized against black faille or heavy satin, these exquisite clasps and frames are breath takingly beautiful, making a princely gift for the most discriminating woman.

Well known bags, originals by Josef, dramatize the shimmer of art collector brocades, each bag a unique creation, one of a kind, and therefore to be appreciated far more as a gift than other bags of duplicate design. Less costly are the Josef bags, of festive satins, green, gold, crimson, and bright blue. These, too, are made in simple envelope style, beautifully lined and fitted. Stunning black background brocades are worked with gold or silver thread for the darker colored bags and there are some very effective narrow striped brocades in many colors used for these smart flat envelopes. Prices on these envelopes are amazingly modest, for all their shine of material.

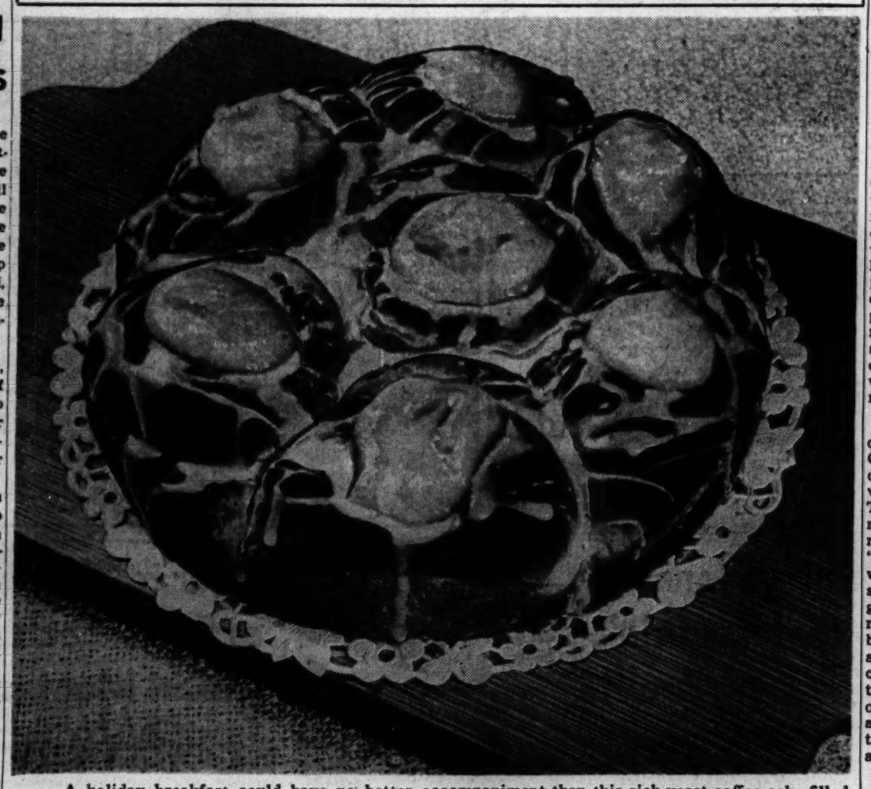
Rich Yeast Coffee Cake for a Holiday Breakfast



A holiday breakfast could have no better accompaniment than this rich yeast coffee cake filled with currants and topped with lemon filling. To make two 9 inch cakes: [TRIBUNE Studio Photo]

Combine 1 cup scalded milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, and 2 tablespoons shortening in large mixing bowl and cool. When lukewarm, add 1 cake crumbled yeast and 1¼ cups flour and beat thoroly. Gradually stir in 1¼ cups more flour, adding just enough to make a soft dough; turn out on floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, adding flour as necessary. Place dough in greased bowl and brush with melted shortening; cover and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk [1 to 2 hours]. Punch down and let stand for 15 minutes. Roll dough ½ inch thick, brush with melted butter, and sprinkle with a mixture of 6 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, and ½ cup currants; roll as for jelly roll and cut in 1 inch slices. Place rolls, cut side down, close together in two 9 inch greased pans, brush with melted butter, and let rise until light. Make a depression in center of each roll with bottom of a small glass. Bake in a hot oven [400 degrees] for 15 to 20 minutes. When cakes are cooled, fill each depression with plain or lemon filling or thick jam. Trickle thin confectioners' sugar icing over all.

History of the race relations committee of the Woman's City club will be reviewed at 7:30 o'clock tonight in headquarters at the third in a series of meetings concerned with historic backgrounds of the club. Mrs. John Sharpless Fox and Mrs. Ida M. Laws, present co-chairmen, and Miss Roberta Burgess, who headed the committee for many years, will present the review.

It was thru her work with the committee that Mrs. Laws was given recognition in race relations work that resulted in her appointment as adviser to the United States board of parole of the federal reformatories for women. She is the only Negro woman in Chicago now holding such an appointment. Following the history resume, Mrs. Lovelyn J. Evans, club member, will describe her duties as personnel worker in a large national industrial plant which changed its entirely white staff during war time to one composed more than 50 per cent of persons of other races.

At 1:30 p. m. Mrs. Henry C. Dormitzer's public education committee will present a program on the Chicago Teachers college. Miss Sophia Camenisch, retired member of the college staff, will speak.

Morini Plays Felicitous Mendelssohn with Lange and Chicago Symphony Orchestra

Concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Hans Lange, conductor; Erica Morina, violinist. Presented in Orchestra hall Thursday evening, Dec. 6, 1945, and scheduled for repetition Friday afternoon. The program:
Concerto for String Orchestra .....Rozsa
[First Chicago performance]
Concerto for Violin, E minor...Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 7, A major.....Beethoven

It has been a long time since Orchestra hall had heard as felicitous a performance of the Mendelssohn Concerto as Erica Morini's last night with Hans Lange and the Chicago Symphony orchestra. It was fresh and serenely unaffected, and it was superbly played with a delicate brilliance that understood the innocence of the slow movement and the bubbling gayety of the elfin finale. Mis Morini's tone had the exquisite purity that can make the violin a strong contender as the loveliest of instruments, and her performance was not only technically impeccable, which can be a cold phrase, but warmly, compellingly magnetic. The orchestra gave her supple support, not only in delicately balanced strings, but in winds that were downright debonair.

There was an agreeable novelty on the program, too, Miklos Rozsa's Concerto for String Orchestra, a deftly ear-filling exercise for those virtuoso voices of the orchestra. The opening movement, with allegro molto appassionato to live up to, reminded me a little of Schoenberg's "Verklärte Nacht," so ardent was its wooing of gentle dissonance. The slow movement, keyed to the viola, gets as pleasantly intoxicated in mixtures of string sounds as a bumble bee in a highly scented garden, and the finale turns more mechanical in a skilled exhibition of how to go about the familiar business of beginning with the double basses and stepping up the tonal stairs to the violins. It was fun and the audience approved.

Mr. Lange ended the concert with Beethoven's Seventh Symphony in a performance that was clean and strong, tho it lacked the tumultuous brilliance in the finale to bring it to a convincing conclusion. But it was honest Beethoven that knew the work's magical stature, and it held that indefinable quality you might call juice, which means the difference between a living performance of music and one that dies in your ears. The slow movement was beautifully played, and the great scherzo had true Beethoven splendor.

That Man Berle Again

Milton Berle and "Spring in Brazil," first booked into the Erlanger Jan. 7, then canceled as "closing for repairs," will be coming into the Great Northern Christmas week, the definite date to be decided in a day or two. Meanwhile, Elisabeth Bergner may extend "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" at that theater beyond Dec. 15, and again she may not. That, too, will be announced soon.

Philadelphia Pension Plans

The Philadelphia orchestra should end the season with a sizable sum added to its pension foundation. Three special concerts have been announced to swell its coffers, which also are to receive income from broadcasting the Saturday morning concerts for children. Eugene Ormandy will conduct two of the special concerts, a Tschaikowsky program Jan. 14, with Eugene List, pianist, and Carroll Glenn, violinist, as soloists, and a Wagner program, soloist to be announced, on March 31. George Szell will be guest conductor March 4, with Artur Schnabel as piano soloist.

Sugar to Stay at 5 Lbs. Each for 4 Months

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—Individual sugar rations will continue at five pounds for four months from January thru April but housewives may find it harder to get sugar in January and February, the office of price administration announced today. A new sugar stamp, No. 39, will be validated Jan. 1.

Sugar allotments to industrial users generally will be at the same levels for the first quarter of 1946 as at present, the OPA statement said. It added that the only exception will be for such products as jams, jellies, marmalades, and fruit butters. An adjustment applicable to some producers of these products is being prepared and will be announced soon, the OPA said.

Sugar allotments for institutions during the January-February period will be computed on the same permeal allowances as at present, the OPA said, and there will be no change in the rate of refreshment allotments.

Shipments of new crops of Caribbean sugar are not expected in substantial volume until March 1, according to the agriculture department. The OPA said that this meant that only about one-half of the allocations made for the first quarter would be available during January or February, especially for the east coast which normally depends on Caribbean sources.

Mrs. George F., Chicago—I've learned that my oven isn't always to blame if my cake results aren't good. A very dark pan will cause a darker and heavier bottom crust than a bright, shiny pan.

Grace S., Traverse City, Mich.—To prevent rust marks when I place heavy wet articles on hangers to dry, I pad the hangers well. And I can also give better shape to the wet articles if I wrap toweling around the hangers.

Mamie J., Kokomo, Ind.—To remove a grease spot from a dark woolen, I apply a solution of borax and warm water. Then I rinse and let it dry before pressing.

Mrs. H. G., Milwaukee, Wis.—My husband removes mild discolorations from old engravings or prints by placing the print, face upward, in a shallow pan of water and letting it stand in the sunlight for several hours. He keeps the print well covered by one-fourth inch of water. Don't try this if the print is colored.

Emily P., Chicago—I dry jerseys flat to prevent them from stretching and iron them when dry.

Has Your Little Girl As Bright A Future As Nancy?

Right from the start, Nancy's mother has made sure that her daughter was getting plenty of sunshine, and a diet adequate in bone-building minerals. Nancy's legs will be as strong and straight, and her teeth as sound, as sufficient calcium can make them.

Will your child have these assets? Although even sufficient calcium cannot correct bowed legs after a child is three, an adequate supply is important right through life to keep bones sturdy and help the child look his best. That's one of the main reasons why doctors advise that children get plenty of milk...the best food source of calcium.

However, as children grow older, they are often reluctant to drink all the milk they should have.

That's where Cocomalt can prove invaluable. For not only does Cocomalt give milk a delicious chocolaty flavor that children love, but it* is so rich in calcium it makes 3 glasses of milk equal to a whole quart in calcium value. (Also ensures the day's entire minimum requirements for iron, phosphorus, Vitamin B_1 and D.)

Start your children on Cocomalt today. Save this as a reminder to order from your grocer.

Like Puddings? Use Old Bread in Making Them

BY MARY MEADE

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

An accumulation of old bread need never be discarded if you have a taste for puddings and some good recipes in your files. Bread pudding is not only a nourishing dessert but one that's good to eat and really economical.

Altho old fashioned bread pudding is a standby in most families, it needn't and shouldn't have the same flavor combinations every time it's served. Vary your own favorite recipe with dried fruits, chocolate, or nuts, or try one of these for a new flavor twist.

Crumb Pudding
[Serves six]

- 4 to 5 slices stale bread
- 1 egg, separated
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 cups milk
- Dash of cinnamon
- Grated rind of 1 lemon
- ½ cup raisins
- 2 teaspoons butter
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar

Pour small amount of water over bread and let soak. Squeeze out excess water. Beat in egg yolk, then add sugar, milk, cinnamon, lemon, and raisins. Beat well. Fold in beaten egg white and turn into greased baking dish. Dot with butter and sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake in a moderate oven until firm, about 45 minutes.

Banana Butterscotch Bread Pudding
[Serves six]

- 2 cups cubed dry bread
- 1 quart scalded milk
- ¾ cup brown sugar
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- Dash of salt
- 1 large banana

Soak the cubed bread in the hot milk. Add the brown sugar and butter which have been cooked together for 3 minutes over low heat, then the eggs and salt. Combine with sliced banana in a buttered baking dish and bake at moderate heat, 350 degrees, for about 50 minutes. Serve warm or chilled.

Lemon Meringue Bread Pudding
[Serves six]

- 10 slices white bread, cubed
- 3 eggs, separated
- ½ cup sugar
- Grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
- 2 cups milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 6 tablespoons sugar for meringue

Place bread in buttered casserole. Beat egg yolks with ½ cup sugar until light; add lemon rind and juice, milk, and vanilla. Pour over bread. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, about half an hour or until custard is set. Make a meringue of stiffly beaten egg whites and remaining sugar. Spread over pudding and return to oven until lightly browned.

Chocolate Nut Pudding
[Serves four]

- 2 cups milk
- 1 square unsweetened chocolate
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 cup soft whole wheat bread crumbs
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans

Scald the milk; add the chocolate and butter. When the chocolate is melted, beat with a rotary beater until blended. Add bread crumbs and let stand for 5 minutes. Add the sugar, salt, slightly beaten egg and vanilla, and stir until sugar is dissolved. Fold in chopped nuts. Pour the mixture into a buttered baking dish, and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 1 hour, or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. This pudding may be cooked in a double boiler for about 45 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Sugar Stamp 38, in Book 4, expires Dec. 31.

Today's $5 Prize Winning Recipe

- 1 cup butter
- 1 cup sugar

- 4 cups seeded raisins
- 4 cups chopped candied fruit mix
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup grape juice
- 2 tablespoons molasses

Gradually stir in sifted dry ingredients mixed with fruit and nuts, alternately with combined grape juice and molasses. To Sweeten Grapefruit Without Sugar Is Simple

Salt instead of sugar on a half grapefruit is what some gourmets prefer. But if you like it sweetened, here are some ways which won't deplete your sugar supply: Top the halves with corn sirup, maple sirup, or honey; place a bit of fruit jelly or jam in the center of each; or mix chopped marshmallows or raisins with the sections and refill the shell.

Butter Balls Give Meal That Added Little Touch

Butter balls give a festive air to meals. To make the balls, drop teaspoons of butter into a bowl of ice water. Scald wooden paddles then place in ice water with butter. When both are well chilled, lightly roll each piece of butter between paddles into balls. Drop the balls back into the ice water until ready to serve.

Because of the softness of soup, crisp croutons are an especially good accompaniment. They're easily made from left-over or dry bread. Cut the bread in small squares or narrow strips and toast in a moderate oven, or brown lightly in a small amount of fat in a skillet.

"With Bated Breath"

By Alice Campbell

(Copyright, 1945, by Mrs. Alice Ormond Campbell)

SYNOPSIS: Avis Marriott accepts a job as companion-housekeeper to Maud and Erica Bolles, wealthy spinsters. Maud, a local autocrat known for her charities, has grown penurious in her years. Erica, a semi-invalid, is dominated by Maud. Robin Grier, Maud's godson; Mrs. Olive Marks, a widow and family connection, and an evacuee family live with them at Turrets, an isolated English manor with an abandoned underground passage. Dr. Bruce advises Avis not to accept the position. Avis' predecessor, Agatha Trimble, left under a cloud, suspected of theft. She was teaching Erica to assert herself. Avis' room is in the turret, near Erica's. Oscar Moravian arrives on Erica's invitation. The soldier husband in the evacuee family falls downstairs to his death. Smears of wax are on the stairs. Did some one want to kill Erica? Maud has been trying to have Erica adjudged mentally incompetent. Avis narrowly escapes death when a bullet penetrates her hat. After receiving Agatha's letter Maud gets drunk. She claims an attempt was made on her life, that her keys were used, an automatic pistol was taken from her desk, and her liquor was drugged. Erica had visited the wine cellar. Robin found Moravian going thru Maud's desk. Agatha's body is found in the tunnel, yet her clothing is discovered miles away. The motive may have been robbery. Robin saw a roll of banknotes fall from Agatha's purse. Later he and Avis saw Maud hiding a roll of banknotes. Moravian knew Agatha. Avis hears him trying to persuade Erica to elope with him. Investigating on her own, Avis finds footprints, of which the police have made impressions. About to leave the tunnel, she discovers the ladder is gone and hears footsteps. She screams, the footsteps fade away, and the ladder is located at another vent hole. Searching the car, Avis is startled to have Robin gumshoe up on her. Erica admits to Maud that when Agatha warned her against Moravian they quarreled.

INSTALMENT XXIX.

CABLEGRAM

When Avis went down, both drawing room and study were deserted. The telephone jangled. It must be Cam, ringing up to know how his patient was getting on.

A masculine voice, but not Bruce's. "Who's that?" it said brusquely. "I want to speak to Mrs. Marks."

A pale shape rose up at Avis' elbow. Swiftly Olive snatched the receiver from her hand and spoke a husky "Hello!" She had appeared from nowhere. Avis thought, she must have been expecting this call. She also thought, she's got on a new perfume. Where have I smelled it before? If Olive had a man friend she had kept it remarkably quiet, and now all she was saying was yes and then no. Crossing from the sideboard, Avis spied Moravian. Olive, her back turned, couldn't have seen him at all.

"No!" Olive said again. "No!" And then, goaded, "Do listen to me! Can't you see the sheer idiocy of it, when any day, any hour——"

Swiftly the receiver jammed down. In a flash Avis remembered. Those two figures in the dark lane! The woman, covered by extending arms, had worn a dark coat, but the scent was the same.

In the gloom Olive was speaking to Moravian in her blunt casual drawl.

"How did you find the Bull?" she asked. "I may migrate there, if it's not too utterly drear."

"Certainly. You stopped there before you came here, didn't you? It was where you and Miss Trimble had your flaming row."

"Hardly an apt description, my dear lady," he purred. "It is true that Miss Trimble, totally unknown to me, honored me with a call. She was somewhat hysterical."

It was an Olive hitherto not encountered. The tone, harsh and vulgar, brought a disorganizing shock. "It may have been a first meeting, but Trimble seems to have known a lot about you."

"So she wished to convey," Mr. Moravian made suave acceptance. "In very audible tones she touched upon certain matters of exchequer . . . Has it never occurred to you, my dear Mrs. Marks, that a notable failing—we might even call it a taint—frequently extends to more than one member of a family?"

"What can you mean?" Olive demanded in befogged scorn. The man addressed did not follow up his cryptic remark. Instead, he was giving vent to discreet chuckles as blood chilling as the rattle of dry bones.

"I was thinking of Harry," he said. "I saw him, you know, only a day or so before I left Cairo, last June."

"Harry?" Olive spoke roughly. "What Harry are you talking about?"

"Why your husband, Harry Marks. Like you I had supposed him dead."

"My husband? He is dead!" Her voice was shrill.

"We chatted, I assure you, for half an hour. In the postoffice, it was. After all, he is my brother-in-law! Really, this can't be a surprise. He was in the very act of dispatching a cable to you."

Lagging silence. "Harry's dead," Olive Marks hammered doggedly. "Every one knows he's been dead five years." She was on her feet, a tall pallid shape in the thickening darkness advancing on the small figure which edged toward the stair. Softly and distinctly Moravian enunciated.

"One cannot ignore, can one, the singular benefit accruing to both your husband and yourself in the event of our two hostesses quitting this terrestrial sphere without leaving wills?"

"What a hope," Olive jeered.

The white coat poised, a new tautness in its blurred outline. Olive Marks had turned toward the dining room door. For a bare moment the girl inside believed she was going to be told things, offered explanations; but she was wrong. Olive flashed past the doorway, out of the house.

The thing was unthinkable, absurd! And yet if this Marks man was still alive—if he did happen to be these Bolles women's next of kin?

Olive did know. She'd been hugging this knowledge to herself. She'd spoken of her husband as tho he were some remote relation, when all the time . . .

O, it was too utterly silly. Erica might be minus a will just at present, but Maud! Hadn't Olive said . . . Olive! She had said a great number of things. Things she wanted the onlooker to believe? It was Olive who had advised the putting back of any gifts Erica might chance to bestow. And had there been a jealous, predatory prod at the blunt fingers when they felt the garnets inside the high necked jumper? Erica had diamonds hidden somewhere in her room. . . . Suppose Maud had torn up some existing will and Olive had got wise to the fact? Suppose Maud hadn't invented the shot from the hedge—or the luminal, come to that?

All Avis' blood pounded in her head. She was thinking that Oscar might not have been the sole person to discover that Harry Marks was not dead. If Olive had received a cable, Miss Trimble might have seen it.

In which case . . . The automatic pistol! She decided to draw the black-out curtains in Olive Marks' room.

On the second floor she was just in time to see Oscar quietly plodding to the schoolroom above. So he at least was out of the way. She listened, but not a rustle came from the remaining bedrooms.

The first object her eye rested on was a new and expensive bottle of Channel Cinq. There was nothing in the various untidy drawers she began feverishly to search. She raked swiftly beneath the mattress. Nothing; but in the crammed wardrobe she found a hat box, and at the bottom of it, under several discarded hats, a long, thick white envelope with a banker's address engraved on the back. It had been directed to Mrs. Olive Marks, 2 Jasper court, South Kensington, S. W. 7. Inside was a brief typed message, signed by a manager's scrawl.

"Dear Madam," it ran. "We take pleasure in forwarding to you the enclosed African cablegram."

The date was Sept. 16; but the cable was not here.

Laymen Urged to Be Church's Press Agents

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS

Lay leaders from many Protestant churches last night heard an experienced industrial public relations executive's opinion of what the churches should do toward creating more important positions for themselves in their communities. He also applied public relations principles to their advancement.

The speaker, Kinsey M. Merritt of New York, head of public relations for the Railway Express agency, appeared under auspices of the Church Federation of Greater Chicago in the Hotel Sherman. Speaking also as lay leader of the Newark, N. J., Methodist conference, Mr. Merritt said, "Everything church people do helps others form their picture of religion; thus the church people must regard themselves as important public relations agents for their churches."

Mr. Merritt outlined findings of an opinion survey concern's study of why people do not go to church. First on list was, "Religion is impractical." Another was, "Religion is a form of insurance to be taken out close to death." Another said that "Religion is a back number and isn't going anywhere," and still another, "One can't have any fun if he's a Christian."

Queries put to 800 persons across the country by Mr. Merritt disclosed that 51 per cent would go to church if the churches were "physically comfortable." He said the discomforts run from hard pews in unattractive buildings to being too hot, too cold, and full of draughts.

Asked what he thought of church advertising, Mr. Merritt said he believed in institutional advertising for churches when handled by an expert advertising man, similar to that done by a railroad association or by the meat industry. The churches, he explained, should group together and purchase sufficient space to tell the story, not of one local church, but of all churches.

Blame Paris' Export Slash on Red Tape

BY ANNE BRUYERE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Dec. 6 — Jean Gaumont-Lanvin, who recently was elected president of the Chambre Syndicale de la Couture Parisienne, replacing Lucien Lelong, protested today that French couturiers are able to export only 5 per cent of their pre-war volume because of what he termed the crippling policy adopted by the National Center of Foreign Commerce here.

According to Bernard Jullenne of the Paris Chamber of Commerce, numerous steps are necessary to obtain a license to send French goods abroad.

"First, the exporter must go to the service centrale de license in his district," he said. "There his request is made out in sextuplet. It usually takes three months to obtain approval, after which the last copies go to the recipient and the exporter himself. Finally the client abroad pays his money to the office des changes, which transfers foreign currency into francs before the exporter may collect."

The Paris district still is the largest exportation center in France, Julienne said. He added that altho business is picking up it is not profitable to send goods abroad now because of inflation here.

Lanvin complained that Paris haute couture establishments already are hard hit by all the domestic duties, including luxury taxes, and are dependent on luxury and semi-luxury items such as costume jewelry and leather trimmings, which in turn are highly taxed. In addition, he said, wages for personnel have tripled since the war and yardage prices have soared to at least 10 times higher than in 1939.

"Instead of encouraging French exportation," he asserted, "the National Center of Foreign Commerce is prohibiting it by excessive red tape."

FASHIONS
By Angela

The crush in the toy departments is almost insurmountable, but sturdy souls who attempt and survive it come thru with some of the most exciting toys Santa Claus and his helpers have produced in years.

Popular for little girls is the 20 inch composition doll, upper left, beautifully dressed in a pale peach rayon taffeta dress trimmed with blue loops and bows. The matching ruffled bonnet is edged with ruffled ribbon. A white slip, underpants, socks, and shoes complete her outfit, but most fascinating are her eyes, which she opens and closes.

The delicate looking windmill music box, lower left, long will be a source of enjoyment to any child. Sturdily built, it has a quaint Dutch boy and girl and typical scenes against a white mill and contrasting red and blue arms.

Any beginning artist from age 3 on will enjoy the finger painting set, center. It has a board, sheets of white paper, four jars of colored paints, and three sticks. An accompanying instructive sheet of directions proves fascinating to adults and children alike.

The domestic miss who washes her doll's clothes will be speechless at the sight of the metal washing machine, lower right, which works with a hand gadget and has a real wringer. It is about 12 inches high.

Airplane minded boys who play with pull toys would be entranced by the helicopter, upper right. The wheels slide smoothly across surfaces and are geared to a bar which causes the propeller to revolve rapidly. A red string is attached to the plastic nose of the model.

Bette Davis' Honeymoon Interrupted by Flat Tire

VICTORIA, Guanajuato, Mexico, Dec. 6 (AP)—Bette Davis and her new husband, William Grant Sherry, waited here today for the arrival of government cars from Mexico City, 350 miles away, to take them to the capital. Their last good spare tire blew out here. The newlyweds are guests of the government.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 6—If present plans jell, Frank Capra will produce the New York stage hit, "The State of the Union" for the screen as soon as he finishes "It's a Wonderful Life." I hope he gets Gary Cooper for the lead. With its authors, Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse, and its producer, Leland Hayward, all participating in the deal, the picture will be started in about six months, when Frank finishes his present deal. But it's a picture that must be made before it's dated if it's to have the proper salutary effect on the citizens of this union. . . . Two weeks before Franz Werfel died, his great friend, Dr. Bruno Walter, bought a house next door to him. Now Werfel's widow and Dr. Walter will wed and occupy the house themselves.

Constance Is a Busy Bennett

Ran into Constance Bennett just before she left for a four day trip to New York. I asked her if she were taking the children. She said, "No, but I'm taking my French poodle." Connie's going to confer with the man who's writing her next picture—in which she'll star. She's also introducing a new perfume. "I know it's the wrong time," she said, "with all the French perfumes coming back on the market—but did you ever know me, Hopper, when I didn't do things the hard way?" . . . Darryl Zanuck has already sent a camera crew to Arizona to photograph background cloud effects for "The Razor's Edge." After that, they'll go to northwestern India to do scenes for process use. Incidentally, while daily bulletins are being issued on stars likely to get the Isabel role in that picture, I still believe Olivia de Havilland will play it.

The Broad-Way to Hollywood

I went slightly overboard on Murvyn Vye, who plays "Jigger" in "Carousel," even before learning that he'll be Hollywood bound in June with a Paramount contract. I was able to introduce him to his boss, Henry Ginsberg. Tho he's been on the stage only three years, I'm betting that, given the proper parts, he'll be a star within a year. Incidentally, he used to be a roommate of Pasadena's Al Wright Jr. at Yale. . . . Here's a human interest story concerning Sam Goldwyn. When he was told by a Mount Saint hospital doctor that a 16 year old patient's one request was to see "Wonder Man" Sam arranged for the film to be shown from the boy's bedside. Not only that, Danny Kaye is making a telephone call to the boy from New York. . . . The Kayes have taken a New York apartment, and he's arranged for his wife's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Fine, to spend the month in Tucson, Ariz. . . . Now that Merle Oberon is out of the hospital and resting in a Boston hotel, she may be able to spend Christmas with the Fred Astaires in Aiken, S. C., after all.

It's All in the Family

Laurette Taylor's son, Dwight, will illustrate her autobiography. He did a book of his own at 15, and the illustrations in it were charming. . . . Larry Marks is helping Estelle Taylor with her book, "Pillow Slips." . . . Before Loretta Young took off for the desert with Tom Lewis she rushed in to Rex of Frederics' and ordered three hats so she'd be ready to step out in the social world the minute she came back. . . . They're still working up army stories here. Now Jack Morse has done an original called "Hector." It's the tale of a timid sergeant who gets the thankless task of looking after his superior officer's daughters while the old man is overseas. Tho Jack is a reader at Columbia it was Paramount which bought the story. Sounds like a natural for Eddie Bracken.

Notes About Service Stars

Speaking of the army, Eddie Duchin is out of uniform, but expects to soak up some Palm Springs sunshine before returning to the whirl. Same goes for Alfred Vanderbilt Jr. But Sam Goldwyn Jr., who recently won his lieutenant's bars, soon will be heading across the deep blue, and Joe Patterson's son, who is still over there, may go in for a military career. . . . Congratulations to Bill Perlera for having the foresight to sign up John Hambleton as his assistant. . . . The Nion Tuckers of San Francisco are in town for a couple of days to attend the cattle show. . . . Love's old sweet song: Before Lana Turner married Artie Shaw and Steve Crane, then got herself engaged to Turhan Bey, she was in love with Greg Bautzer. Meanwhile, Greg, not so slow himself, met, married, and divorced Buffy Cobb. Now Lana and Greg, like June, are bustin' out all over again. This time it may lead to the altar. But it's hard to keep track of Lana—she's quite a Turner.

JOE WILMAN BOWLS INTO ALL-STAR LEAD

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Joe Wilman, captain of the Chicago Classic league's Monarch Beers, who was runner-up for the 1944 All-Star match game bowling title in a soldier's uniform, last night conducted a civilian homecoming in the Auditorium Service Men's center by capturing the first day's lead in the fifth world series of ten pins with a Petersen point total of 82.29.

Entering today's second round of four matches in the sport's toughest man-tc-man competition, Wilman finds himself pressed only by the voluble and acrobatic Andrew Varipapa of Hempstead, N. Y. The veteran trick shot practitioner dominated the two matches which comprised yesterday's opening two bouts of four games, but Wilman, the confident and poised Berwyn campaigner, outsteadied him in the rough going, altho the two are not due to meet until the penultimate squad on Sunday, the night of the big show's climax.

Varipapa Leads in Pins

Varipapa wound up the first day's battling with 80.22 for his point mark. Andy held the highest total pin score of the day with 3,522, against Joe's 3,479, but the latter had a won-and-lost record of 13 and 3 to the New Yorker's 10 and 6.

Most remarkable conclusion to the day's mathematics was the pair of 77.15s with which Frank Benkovic, the roying Milwaukee strike and spare professor, and the hustling Pvt. Therman Gibson of Scott field, Ill., shared third and fourth places.

Pursuing them in the first day's standings were two former holders of the match game championship, Connie Schwoegler of Madison, Wis., and Ned Day of West Allis, Wis.

Buddy Bomar, defending champion, wound up in 12th place with 70.24 points and 3,159 pins.

BIG 10 PLANS TO PICK CHAMPIONS

Sports Honors Will Be Official Hereafter

BY WILFRID SMITH

Eligibility requirements for athletic competition in the Western conference, primary discussion of the directors and faculty members at the winter meetings of the Big Ten which opened yesterday in the Sherman hotel, probably will not be revised until next May on the occasion of the conference track meet. This was the general impression at initial conversations yesterday and was based on the present draft law and the proposed peace time conscription of 18 year olds.

The athletic directors recommended formal designation of champions in football, basketball, and baseball, and also proposed that tie games be computed in the percentage column on the basis of one-half a victory and one-half a defeat.

Take Unofficial Poll

In recommending official selection of champions, the athletic directors emphasized that the proposal was not intended to determine a conference representative for post-season competition—such as the football bowl games.

The coaches, directors, and faculty members, in an unofficial poll, are unanimous for return to peace time eligibility restrictions for athletes as soon as possible, but several coaches were vociferous in their belief that freshmen must be permitted to compete under present circumstances.

Stuhldreher Heads Directors

Guy Mackey, Purdue's director of athletics, presided at the session of the conference directors and then retired in favor of Harry Stuhldreher, Wisconsin's director, who will serve for the next year. K. L. Wilson, who succeeded the late Maj. John L. Griffith last spring as commissioner of athletics for the Big Ten, made his report. Later James Masker, who is supervisor of officials for the commissioner, reported on his phase of work.

No announcements of definite conference action can be made until tomorrow as the faculty committee is final authority altho the directors may make recommendations. The faculty men and the directors are scheduled to meet tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in executive session. The faculty committee then will assemble at 2 p. m. in the University club.

Draw Up Schedules Today

Schedules will be drawn today at the Sherman hotel for winter and spring sports. These are wrestling, swimming, indoor and outdoor track, tennis, golf, and baseball. Dates for conference meets also will be set.

Presidents of the Western conference universities, faculty representatives, and athletic directors met last evening in a dinner at the University club which was occasion for the celebration of the 50th year of the conference.

Third Major League May Have Friends

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

The Pacific Coast league, instead of being shooed away from the front door because of its desire to attire itself in major league clothes, actually may find it has some friends in the crowd when it formally presents its plea to the 16 big time owners in the meeting here next week.

This was the word brought back yesterday by Will Harridge, American league president, from the Columbus, O., minor league convention, where, a few days ago, the Coast leaguers decided to declare themselves.

But even tho the majors accepted the announcement calmly, it doesn't follow that enough of them will vote favorably, altho the outcome depends on how good a case the Pacific Coast league's presentation committee can work up for itself.

A Touchy Subject

With the Coast league far removed from the territory now staked out by the majors, the matter of competition doesn't enter into the case, but there is the item of players, and on this point the majors are sort of touchy.

The supply of outstanding players never has been sufficient to stock two big leagues and to have a third enter the competition would increase the demand by just that much. At the same time it would eliminate the Coast league as a source of supply for the American and National leagues, both as to purchase and drafting of players.

Majors Meet Next Week

The plea probably will be made at a joint meeting presided over by Commissioner A. B. Chandler, altho the two majors expect to discuss the proposal in their own separate sessions next Monday and Tuesday. If the request is granted it would mean making the present major league agreement a three way instead of a two way affair. This automatically would make the world series a triangular competition and this feature alone undoubtedly would be welcomed by the baseball customers.

There is a possibility, of course, that the present majors might block the expansion for no other reason than that some of them have their own eyes on Pacific coast league territory.

Meanwhile the Coast league is going to retain its membership in the National association [the minor organization] and if its ambitious plan falls, it at least may emerge with some concessions—such as a boost of the $7,500 price the majors now pay for a drafted player.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—It may be true that the All-America conference has no football, as a spokesman for the National league once imprudently remarked, but it now is apparent to all that it has the biggest ball parks in the United States, hundreds of millions of dollars in resources, and an array of brilliant name players, the like of which is not possessed by any other organized group. . . . The admission of the New York Yankees, with their extensive facilities, guarantees the stability of the organization, in case any one previously questioned its future. . . . The National league, which before the war had two teams in Greater New York at the Polo Grounds and Ebbets field and no competition, now has only one team in the populous metropolitan area and competition from two. . . . In addition, National league clubs in Chicago and Cleveland hereafter will have to bid for patronage in fields that include strong All-America representatives. . . . The new league will bring pro ball on a big time basis to Los Angeles, San Francisco, Baltimore, Buffalo, and Miami, some of which are almost certain to support the sport robustly. . . . There will be another team admitted to the conference before operations begin next fall and it likely will be in one of the larger cities of the east or middle west.

The character of football in the post-war era is well defined. . . . The National league and the All-America conference will vie for the backing of pro followers and both groups are committed to the protection of college ball. . . . Once the complications developed by the war are removed—and they will disappear in a year or two—there will be no players in pro uniforms who have collegiate eligibility remaining. . . . Despite the shadow boxing by a few college coaches and athletic directors, undergraduate football has nothing to fear from the major professional leagues. . . . College football will flourish or decline depending upon the kind of leadership it receives. . . . If the current trend toward semi-professionalism under the guise of amateurism continues the college game will collapse from within, not from competition it may encounter from outside sources. . . . This department has enough faith in executives who head the Big Ten, the Pacific Coast, Eastern Intercollegiate, and other conferences to predict that a thoro housecleaning, either openly or under cover, soon will be effected.

There are some who believe that the rise of the All-America conference will ruin the National league. . . . It will do nothing of the sort unless the parent league is more stupid than even some of its recent moves indicate. . . . The All-America is a challenge to the National league, nothing more. . . . It can be wholesome competition or destructive, whichever the National prefers. . . . Refusal of the National league to meet with the All-America to discuss a working agreement already has cost the older organization at least $250,000 in cash and untold sums in prestige. . . . It will run into millions in short time if that's the way they want it. . . . That colossal blunder gave the new unit time to corral scores of the country's greatest players, coaches, stadiums, and wealth. . . . Players who belong to National league clubs are capitalizing on their opportunities. . . . Now that contracts are up for renewal some hasten into print with reports of fantastic offers from teams in the All-America. . . . It's amusing when you happen to be in position to know the facts.

The National league is made up mainly of owners who have spent years establishing the popularity of pro football. . . . They have worked earnestly and tirelessly to build integrity, showmanship, and high caliber entertainment. . . . They are in a sport whose popularity is too extensive to be restricted to a few cities or one league, but they are entitled to fair competition. . . . The All-America is led by men of great affluence who acquired their money in activities other than football. . . . They are good business men. . . . It's a bad policy, as every one knows, to spend foolishly or extravagantly, but the new group will come up with whatever it takes to make the All-America an enduring institution in American sport.

December's Child

Courageous is December's child,
Emotional as well;
A little sweet, a little wild,
Whose thoughts are hard to tell.
A love of games and sports abounds
In that impulsive heart,
An urge to travel—get around
Which has no counterpart.
December's child is hard to win,
And often hard to know,
As warm as Christmas time within,
Yet hates an outward show.
Narcissus is December's flower,
And turquoise is the stone;
Excitement lives with every hour,
And venture is its throne.

MINORS VOTE A CUT IN POWER FOR CHANDLER

Ignore Plea from Commissioner

Columbus, O., Dec. 6 (AP)—The minor leagues today voted to curb Commissioner A. B. Chandler's power over them only a few minutes after the commissioner himself pleaded with them against legislation "offensive and obnoxious" to him personally.

The minor league delegates listened to a short speech by Chandler, who approached mention of his row with some baseball men by pointing out he "did not seek the job," but intends to hold it for seven years. Then he pointed to "resolutions before you that are offensive and obnoxious to me personally."

The Answer Is No

The minors then quickly approved, 21 to 3, an amendment to baseball law taking away the commissioner's authority to declare any of their legislation "detrimental to baseball." This was the rule which gave the late Commissioner K. M. Landis most of his power.

The only dissenting votes to the amendment were cast by the Southern association, the Texas league, and the Sally league.

The convention went on to refuse approval of proposed legislation which would have wiped from the books minor league rules governing bonuses—which Chandler had ruled are both "unfair and illegal." These rules stipulate that no player below class AA can receive a bonus for signing contracts and no manager can receive a bonus or any part of the purchase or draft price of player.

W. G. Bramham, president of the minors, later said any bonus contract will be approved by him from class AAA down to D.

Approve Change in Rating

The convention approved the advance of the International league, American association, and Pacific Coast league to new AAA classification. A vote on the bid of the Pacific Coast league to step up into the major leagues was tabled until tomorrow.

The revised major-minor league agreement, as drawn up by the minor league revision committee, headed by Eastern League President Tommy Richardson, was approved and now goes to the majors for concurrence.

Happy Talks Turkey

"I have a contract for seven years, and for seven years I intend to make decisions for baseball which you are not able to make yourselves," Chandler told the convention.

"If you've got anything to say to me, say it to me. I have found out that you talk behind a fellow's back. But I find it out because you fellows can't keep secrets.

"I'm going to do the best I can with God's help to render just and fair decisions. You've got resolutions before you that are offensive and obnoxious to me personally. If you don't pass them, that's OK. If you pass them, I want you to know that."

Humphries Is Sold to Phils by White Sox

BY EDWARD BURNS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Columbus, O., Dec. 6—The winter baseball show, such as it has been to date, today started to move to Chicago, where hope will bloom anew in the hearts of nabobs and managers who covet other men's player chattels and have chattels of their own to unload.

Harry Grabiner, retiring vice president of the White Sox, and Les O'Conner, the incoming general manager, took off for Chicago after announcing the club had disposed of Pitcher Johnny Humphries in a deal with the Phillies, which included cash and Pitcher Frank Martin from Utica, N. Y., of the Eastern league. They were the vanguard and by tomorrow night Chicago will be swarming with baseball folk, tho the formal opening of the major league's three day convention will not take place till Tuesday.

Don't Expect Too Much

The minor league convention here has not been a flop from the viewpoint of the purpose for which it was held—weighty debate and gusty resolution passing. But the fleshmart thing was a bust, as usual. Because of the post-war aspects of the personnel setup there had been some prediction of increased player dealing, and there may be action in Chicago. But don't hold your breath.

Sixty-five newspapers were represented here by staff reporters, plus the corps of experts for the major wire services. The news starved gents included 23 from major league cities who will proceed to Chicago, naively hopeful that some of the rumors will come true.

Some are waiting for the St. Louis Cardinals to begin peddling their surplus of star talent. In Columbus Owner Sam Breadon has spent a considerable time emphasizing he will not sell or trade either Marty Marion or Red Schoendienst. He has not been so emphatic about Whitey Kurowski, but there hasn't been any great clamor for the Card third baseman.

They'll Discuss Night Games

Humphries was with the Sox for five seasons. Last season he won 6 and lost 14. In 1941 Johnny won four and lost two, all of the victories being shutouts in a span of one month. The following season he won 12 and lost 12, then 11 and 11, and in 1944 he became a sub-.500 pitcher with 8 victories and 10 defeats.

Much of the business of the majors in Chicago will pertain to squelching or approving different ideas thought up by the minors here—things like the Pacific Coast league's thought that it is a major circuit.

Among the biggest strictly major league issues will be that pertaining to night baseball. The Yankees, tho they are just installing lights, will ask a curtailment to seven games.

SID RICHARDSON APPOINTED NEW N. U. GOLF COACH

Sid Richardson, former captain of Northwestern university's golf team, who recently went on inactive duty in the United States naval reserve with the rank of lieutenant commander, has been appointed golf coach and manager of the university's golf course. This was announced yesterday by T. B. [Ted] Payseur, athletic director.

LAMOTTA MEETS PARHAM TONIGHT

Bout Heads Last '45 Card in Stadium

BY FRANK MASTRO

Charley Parham, Milwaukee welterweight who looks like a lightweight and punches like a light heavyweight, will receive his big chance tonight against Jake Lamotta, foremost contender for Tony Zale's middleweight championship, in a 10 round bout heading the last boxing show of the year in Chicago Stadium.

Parham is a competent performer against men in his own weight class as proved by his knockouts this year over Bobby Richardson, Art Brown, Barry Wright, Savior Canadeo, and Dave Riley. Against middleweights, however, the 23 year old Milwaukeean is an unknown quantity, especially when the 160 pounder possesses the ruggedness and skill of Lamotta, who also is 23.

Jake Expected to Win

That's the reason Jake is a strong favorite to score his third straight victory and his third triumph in five Chicago appearances. In his last start here, he lost a disputed decision to Ray [Sugar] Robinson on Sept. 26.

Joey Lamotta, 19 year old brother of Jake, will be in quest of his 22d knockout in 29 fights in a 10 round semi-windup against Art Brown, hard hitting south side welterweight. Joey knocked out Martin Doyle and Al Jackson in previous Chicago appearances.

Golden Glovers Are Foes

Robert Satterfield and Collins Brown, Golden Gloves products who punch with authority, will clash in a third match of 10 rounds. Satterfield, who has stopped nine foes in 11 contests, has agreed to weigh 168 pounds at the weighing-in ceremonies at the Illinois Athletic commission today. Brown, whose record includes 10 knockouts in 18 contests, probably will carry 163 pounds.

Gene Roberts, former Danville, Ill., sectional Golden Gloves winner, is paired with Herman Mills in one of three bouts of five rounds. Roberts will be trying for his 16th consecutive triumph. Red Grant, Denver junior lightweight, who recently defeated Hank Okura, will oppose Butch Maxwell of Gary, and Jack Hill, Bloomington, Ill., light heavyweight, will face Art Saxell of Los Angeles.

BISSONETTE TO BOSS HARTFORD CLUB IN 1946

Fill-In at Boston Goes Back to Minor Leagues

Columbus, O., Dec. 6 (AP)—Del Bissonette, who finished out the 1945 season as manager of the Boston Braves, will pilot Hartford in the Eastern league next year, John Quinn, head of the Braves farm system, announced today.

Bissonette took over with the Braves following the resignation of Bob Coleman. Coleman will manage Evansville in the Three-Eye league next season, Quinn added.

The Detroit Tigers, who won the world championship last year with one coach, signed two more, one of whom was Tommy Bridges. The other is Frank Shellenbach, former Pacific Coast league manager.

Bruno Betzel, released last week as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers' farm club in the International league, was signed by the New York Giants to pilot their Jersey City farm. Betzel is succeeded at Montreal by Clay Hopper, who managed the Mobile, Ala., club last year.

The Boston Braves boosted their farm system to eight clubs by signing a working agreement with Indianapolis of the American association. Ted McGrew, baseball veteran, who became general manager of the Indianapolis club this year, was signed to head the farm system. His staff of scouts includes Johnny Moore, who was released by the Cubs recently.

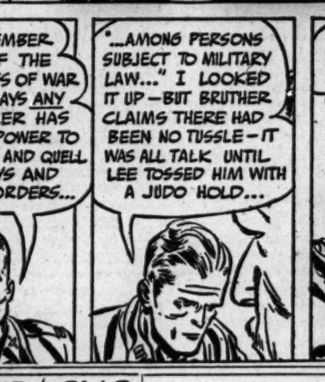
The New York Yankees sold Hershel Martin, a regular outfielder for the last two seasons, to Oakland of the Pacific Coast league.

One of the most persistent rumors was that the St. Louis Cardinals are preparing to peddle Catcher Walker Cooper, who is still in the navy, and that the most persistent bidders are the New York Giants, the Boston Braves, and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Another report said the Cleveland Indians may be sold to Bing Crosby.

The Brooklyn Dodgers signed Ray Hayworth, veteran catcher, to manage their Fort Worth farm team in the Texas league.

The Pirates announced the sale of Infielder Al Rubeling to Syracuse of the International league and the release of Coach Jake Flowers at his own request to join the Boston Braves.



WEBER JUNIORS HOLD STEINMETZ TO SINGLE POINT

Stalling tactics employed by Weber High school's junior basketball team limited the Steinmetz juniors to one point yesterday as the Red Horde scored an 11 to 1 triumph in the Steinmetz gym.

Weber scored seven points in the first period while Steinmetz was recording its sole point, a free throw by Phil Rizzo. Weber held the ball thru most of the remaining three quarters, adding two points in the second period, and two more in the fourth after a scoreless third quarter. Weber also won the senior game, 33 to 25.

Stan Wasielewski scored 21 points as the Wells juniors registered their third consecutive triumph, defeating Amundsen, 52 to 33.

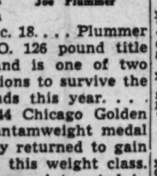
Engineering Student Seeks 4th Ring Title

Joe Plummer Jr., 17 year old engineering student at the Lewis School of Aeronautics, Lockport, Ill., will go after his fourth title when he meets Johnny Mezzano, St. Philomena parish, for the featherweight championship in the finals of the 15th Catholic Youth organization tournament in the Coliseum, Dec. 18. . . . Plummer won the C. Y. O. 126 pound title last December and is one of two defending champions to survive the preliminary rounds this year. . . . Joe won the 1944 Chicago Golden Gloves novice bantamweight medal and last February returned to gain the open title in this weight class. . . . He first became interested in boxing when his father, a Chicago dentist, presented him with a pair of gloves nine years ago. . . . Joe's foes were neighborhood pals until he enrolled at the C. Y. O. gymnasium in 1943. . . . Joe completed two years at Wendell Phillips High school before enrolling at the Lewis school. . . . Mezzano, discharged army veteran, who was a prisoner of war in Germany, won the featherweight championship of Camp Crowder, Mo., last September.



Joe Plummer

In the feature contest at Madison Square Garden tonight, which will be aired coast to coast, Artie Levine, Brooklyn middleweight, (above) meets George "Sonny" Horne, formerly of Niles, Ohio, in a return match that promises to give the fans plenty of what they like about boxing.

Horne entered the Garden ring against Levine last August an 8 to 5 favorite. For five rounds they slugged it out on even terms. In the fifth, however, Horne was cut over an eye and the contest stopped.

Enjoy the excitement, blow by blow, on Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports over American Broadcasting Co. and WENR (890 on your dial) at 10 P. M.

And remember, men . . . LOOK sharp! FEEL sharp! BE sharp! Use Gillette Blue Blades with the sharpest edges ever honed!

The American Gears squad has been bolstered by the addition of three players for their National Basketball league game tonight with the Fort Wayne Zollners in Cicero stadium, 1909 S. Laramie av.

The trio of newcomers are Bob Calihan, former Detroit university and Detroit Eagles star; Carter O'Rourke, former De Paul player, and Connie Mack Berry, a member of the Chicago Bears' football team.

Beg Your Pardon

George Halas, president of the Chicago Bears, said he did not call Dan Topping, president of the New York Football Yankees, to dissuade him from announcing that he was moving his team into the All-America conference, as was reported in press dispatches from New York yesterday. Halas says Topping called him. The Bears' owner further states he did not talk to Topping for two hours. It was only an hour and 28 minutes. Topping incidentally called all owners in the National league to tell them of his action before they had a chance to read it officially in the newspapers.

RELEASE A-BOMB MATERIALS FOR WAR ON CANCER

Army Action Paves Way for Research

BY ROY GIBBONS

Dr. C. P. Rhoads of New York City, chairman of the committee on growth of the National Research council, last night disclosed that the war department has agreed to make available necessary equipment and materials used on the atomic bomb project to enable research workers to radioactivate various chemicals for abundant use in an all-out fight against cancer.

In addition to contributions from the 2 billion dollar atomic bomb enterprise, Dr. Rhoads, who spoke before a 26 state meeting of 100 field army workers of the American Cancer society in the Continental hotel, said the chemical warfare service also has consented to turn over 126 compounds to the same investigators for similar cancer study.

Damage Certain Tissues

The chemical warfare products, he explained, all have a profound effect in damaging certain tissues of the human body. This ability possessed by the compounds, he said, led medical investigators to wonder whether any of the products might be used to kill only cancer cells without harming healthy tissues.

In one type of cancer, one of the products thus far experimented with, he revealed, has had the apparent effect of providing temporary improvement. Tests surrounding use of the chemical, he said, are still a military secret.

Experiments with the single chemical, to date, Dr. Rhoads emphasized, have in no sense developed a chemical curative agent, nor have any cancer victims been cured by use of the compound, he said.

Want to Explore Others

However, he added, the transient results obtained from the chemical have led research workers to the belief that the other 125 chemical agents likewise should be explored in the hope that a chemical cancer cure might be found thru investigation in what he termed this entirely new field of study opened by the tests.

In the use of radioactivated chemicals which he said will be made possible by adaption of some of the secrets of the atomic bomb, Dr. Rhoads disclosed that one form of thyroid cancer seemingly has been poisoned and killed thru the use of radioactivated iodine.

Prior to the atomic bomb and the abundant radioactive energy created in its manufacture, he said, it would have cost $10,000 to secure sufficient radioactivated iodine to treat a single patient.

The cancer meeting which will be in session thru tomorrow is considering plans for raising a $12,000,000 fund to fight cancer on a national basis. The campaign will be launched next April, designated by congress as "Cancer Control month."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

TAFT ASSAILS OPA CAMPAIGN TO SAVE ITSELF

Agency Strays Far Afield, He Says

BY CHARLES GOTTHART
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Dec. 6—A blistering attack against the office of price administration for its "blatant propaganda" to perpetuate itself was delivered today by Sen. Taft [R., O.] after OPA Administrator Bowles had denounced efforts to terminate the agency.

The attack and defense were made before the 50th anniversary meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers which has demanded the removal of price ceilings considered a barrier to full production of many items.

Denouncing current OPA policies for having strayed far from the original aim of war time price control, Taft said Bowles and his agency threaten to delay reconversion by refusing to permit legitimate increases in selling prices made necessary by higher labor and material costs.

Messages Sent with Checks

He said the agency had managed to have OPA messages included with the checks mailed to the dependents of 8 million service men and termed this "probably the most blatant piece of propaganda in which any government bureau has engaged to perpetuate itself." The messages sought to influence an extension of OPA authority beyond its expiration next June 30.

Taft said the agency had "inspired" telegrams received by Washington legislators in which Congress of Industrial Organization unions demanded indefinite extension of price controls.

He denounced OPA "hypocrisy" in refusing to make adjustments in obvious "hardship cases," said this policy threatens to produce another depression, and suggested that if current policy cannot be changed "we would be better off to abolish it."

Tells Need of Increase

"OPA has entirely departed from the original purpose of the price control act and gradually is setting up a complete control of profits instead of prices," said Taft, who had supported the act as a war measure.

"We must adopt a policy which, while preventing the skyrocketing of prices, recognizes that some increase is necessary to bring about ultimate production."

The policy is made "ridiculous" when other government agencies advocate general wage and salary increases, he said. Taft questioned how long this will be permitted to exist, but said "that period may be just long enough to utterly discourage reconversion and bring about serious depression thru increased unemployment."

Bowles excoriated the N. A. M. for advocating removal of price control on Feb. 15.

View on Prices

"Just how high prices would go I do not know," he said. "But at best it [the N. A. M. recommendation] is a risky, reckless gambling policy which in all likelihood would produce a national disaster."

Bowles said that if the N. A. M. had succeeded in achieving its price control legislative goal 18 months ago and prices had risen at the rate of 10 per cent a year the cost of the war would have been increased by 30 billion dollars and 36 billions would have been added to cost of living expenditures.

Warning of what he said would happen to the prices of other commodities, Bowles said that furs and citrus fruits had doubled after price restrictions were removed.

Among others who addressed 4,500 manufacturers attending the congress of American Industry in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, veterans' administrator, pleaded for assistance in fitting returning service men back into industry.

Demands Tax Changed

H. E. Humphreys Jr., finance committee chairman of the United States Rubber company and chairman of the N. A. M. taxation committee, demanded an overhauling of the tax structure which he said was "designed more for social reform than for revenue collection."

He asked for drastically curtailed federal spending and termed double taxation of dividends "one of the most flagrant injustices of the entire tax code." He referred to federal taxation of corporate profits which are taxed again when dividends are distributed to stockholders.

Among 38 state directors of the organization elected was Whipple Jacobs, president of Belden Manufacturing company, Chicago.

American Locomotive's Foreign Orders Heavy

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—American Locomotive company has unfilled orders for 558 steam and diesel locomotives for overseas customers, including 160 locomotives just ordered by France, D. W. Atom Experts Study Future of New Force

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Dec. 6—Some of the scientists and industrialists who produced the atomic bomb peered into the crystal ball today to determine the possibilities of atomic energy and its likelihood of revolutionizing civilization.

Participating in a symposium before the National Association of Manufacturers, the experts agreed that atomic powered automobiles and airplanes lie beyond the foreseeable future, that this form of power as it is understood probably cannot be used in railroad locomotives, and that the smallest moving unit adaptable to atomic power is the ocean liner.

Massive Shield Needed

Massive equipment needed to shield the public against dangerous radioactive elements generated in developing atomic power makes it presently impossible to utilize it in anything smaller than a steamship, they said.

Because of unknown economic factors, their opinions varied widely on the time required to produce atomic energy in commercial generating plants. Depending on many circumstances, this energy would not replace coal for anywhere from a few years to decades. They agreed, if economic factors were not considered, atomic energy could be produced tomorrow.

Participating were Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard university; Dr. S. K. Allison, director of nuclear studies at the University of Chicago; Dr. George T. Felbeck, vice president of Carbide and Carbon Chemicals corporation; Dr. Crawford H. Greenwalt, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.; Maj. Gen. L. R. Groves, army director of the Manhattan atom bomb project; P. C. Keith, president of Hydrocarbon Research, Inc.; William L. Laurence of the New York Times; Dr. Henry D. Smyth, director of physics of Princeton university; Dr. Charles A. Thomas, vice president of Monsanto Chemical company, and James C. White, president of Tennessee Eastman corporation.

Locomotive Held Possibility

Thomas put the atomic locomotive in the "twilight zone," but thought it was a future possibility. For stationary installations, where size is not a factor, atomic power is possible, but service charges cannot be expected to fall drastically if electricity is replaced, it was believed.

Keith expressed the conviction that household electric bills would not be cut more than 10 per cent, nor industrial bills more than 30 per cent.

"Atomic power to compete with coal at $15 a ton is more difficult than making the atomic bomb," said Greenwalt.

BANKERS' GROUP ASSAILS TIME LAG IN LOANS TO VETS

War veterans seeking loans under the GI bill of rights sometimes must wait so long after making application that the value of the loan is nullified, the American Bankers association committee on service for veterans said yesterday. It is meeting in the Drake hotel with representatives of veterans' organizations and the veterans administration to recommend changes in the GI bill to streamline the loan service.

Chester R. Davis, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company and chairman of the committee, said that because of the time lag some veterans have found that their particular business opportunity had disappeared by the time the loan was closed.

John Stelle, national commander of the American Legion, suggested that to shorten the time lag banks, particularly in small towns, be given authority to appraise loan applications without submitting them to the veterans' administration or other government agencies.

NORTHWEST AIRLINES

Please summarize information on Northwest Airlines, Inc.—A. M.

This carrier which previously had operated between Chicago and Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Ore., achieved transcontinental status last June 1 with the opening of its Milwaukee-Detroit-New York route. The Chicago and New York lines to the Pacific are by way of the Twin Cities, with branches to Duluth, Minn., and Winnepeg, Man.

The company was recently recommended by Civil Aeronautics board examiners for an overseas route to Manila and the orient, and it has applied for additional domestic mileage.

Under these conditions, growth possibilities, which of course cannot be accurately estimated so far as future profits are concerned, appear to have engaged the attention of speculators in the company's stock to a greater extent than the past earnings record. The stock recently has been quoted in the 60s. Altho the company's net income in the fiscal year ended last June 30 set a new high record, it was equal to only $1.35 a share on the 539,070 shares. Earnings a share were larger n some years, but on a smaller number of shares. Net losses were reported in 1939 and 1938.

After an initial dividend in 1936 of 30 cents a share, as adjusted, no further distributions were made until 1942, when 50 cents was paid. This yearly rate has since been maintained, providing a yield of less than 1 per cent at recent prices. Net working capital last June 30 was $6,546,000 and book value less than $18 a share. There is no funded debt.

UNION DEMANDS COST 2 BILLION, RAILS CONTEND

View Rule Changes as Harmful

Wage increases and working rule changes sought by 20 railroad unions would add 2 billion dollars annually to operating costs, railroad spokesmen said yesterday in a formal statement covering labor negotiations in progress in the Morrison hotel.

Preliminary conversations to establish the basis for a general conference have been taking place daily, but no agreement has been reached. The railroads have been seeking to separate the wage increase and rules changes demands. Altho the majority of the unions is agreeable, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainemen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have insisted on pressing both wage and rules demands.

Three Issue Statement

D. P. Loomis, chairman of the western carriers' conference committee; H. A. Enochs, chairman for the eastern roads, and J. B. Parris, chairman for the southeastern roads, issued the statement. It set forth that the rule changes demanded by the operating brotherhoods would destroy the "efficiency of the railroads which was so dramatically demonstrated during the war and would wipe out the benefits of billions of dollars which have been invested in the railroad plant in the last two decades."

The statement explained that the rule demands were made before the end of the war, while wage stabilization regulations were in effect, and were admittedly intended to get around the government's inflation controls. The railroads maintain the big issue at present is wages and wish to proceed on that subject.

The 15 nonoperating unions in line with this have converted their varying demands into a uniform request for a wage increase of 30 cents an hour. Three of the operating unions have agreed that wages are the paramount issue. The five operating unions are asking a 25 per cent wage increase with a minimum increase of $2.50 a day besides the rules changes.

Would Hike Costs 100 Pct.

The railroads said the pay roll costs for operating employes would be increased more than 100 per cent if all rules changes and wage increases become effective.

"The rules proposed by the brotherhoods range from demands for two hours' pay for the employes' time in having their watches inspected to limiting arbitrarily the length of frate trains to 70 cars and passenger trains to 14 cars," they said. "The rule changes are most in the 'featherbed' [pay for doing nothing] category, destructive of efficiency and designed to produce more pay."

The railroads have proposed 29 rules changes designed to eliminate penalty wages for services not performed, and "to do away with obsolete rules which impede efficient and economic operation under modern transportation methods."

UNION PACIFIC SEEKS TO RETIRE 55 MILLION DEBT

The Union Pacific railroad yesterday offered to redeem immediately $55,919,000 of noncallable funded debt of leased lines due in 1946 and 1947. Cash to finance the redemptions will be provided from current resources.

The offer covered Oregon Railroad and Navigation company 4 per cent consolidated mortgage bonds due June 1, 1946, to be redeemed at $101.50, Oregon Short Line Railroad company consolidated first mortgage 5 per cent bonds due July 1, 1946, at $104.40, and St. Joseph and Grand Island Railroad company first mortgage 4 per cent bonds due Jan. 1, 1947, at $104.60.

Chicago Plant Makes First 1946 Mercury

Ford Motor company's Chicago assembly plant yesterday completed its first passenger car since the war stopped production, a two door 1946 Mercury sedan. The company also displayed the 1946 line of Lincoln and Mercury automobiles at a special showing for dealers in the Drake hotel.

The exterior appearance of both the Mercury and Lincoln has been changed and both include numerous mechanical improvements over their predecessor 1942 lines, said W. K. Edmunds, Ford regional manager in Chicago. The front grille work of both lines has been redesigned to give the cars a broader, lower appearance.

Mechanical Improvements

Mechanical improvements of the Mercury include silver alloy bearings developed in the war, which are said to give three times the life of the old bearings, an improved oil pump, and interchangeable cylinder heads. The instrument panel has been redesigned for easier reading.

Improved crankcase ventilation reduces sludge in the engine. Brakes have been much improved and the car was said to ride easier.

Production on the Mercury line started recently in Detroit and is expected to accelerate, with a goal of 71,000 planned for the next nine months. Edmunds said production must depend to a large extent on the ability of suppliers to manufacture parts.

Mechanical Window Openers

Many of the mechanical improvements of the Mercury are incorporated in the Lincoln, which also has refinements. One of the most interesting of these is a mechanical system for opening the windows, a system that really works. By the push of one button the driver can open or shut the window beside him. By a push on a second button he can open the window on the opposite side.

The Mercury has a 117 inch wheelbase and is powered by a 100 horse power engine. The Lincoln has a 125 inch wheelbase and a 130 horse power 12 cylinder engine. Prices are expected to be only moderately above the 1942 levels. A typical Lincoln sold in Chicago in 1941, delivered, for about $1,992 and a Mercury for about $1,499.

MAKERS PREDICT FEW NEW RADIOS FOR CHRISTMAS

New York, Dec. 6 [Special]—The radio industry and consumers will be fortunate if a few hundred thousand radio sets are manufactured by Christmas instead of the millions of sets promised, R. C. Cosgrove, president of the Radio Manufacturers association, said today. Cosgrove, who also is vice president and general manager of Crosley corporation and Aviation corporation vice president in charge of sales, spoke to the Radio Executives club.

"I know of one company that set up for the production of 40,000 radios in September, 60,000 in October, 80,000 in November, and 100,000 in December, but it will not get out more than 30,000 sets before Christmas," he said.

He explained that the main obstacle has been a lack of materials, largely because OPA would not approve prices for manufacturers of components that would permit them to recover production costs.

UTILITY SECURITIES' OUTLOOK FAVORABLE, BROKER GROUP TOLD

Increased use of electricity, lower taxes, and a minor reconversion problem make the prospects for electric public utility investments unusually favorable, Harold H. Young of Eastman, Dillon & Co., told the Stock Brokers' Associates of Chicago yesterday. The expected decrease in utilities' output for industry will cause some readjustment, but no physical reconversion problem exists where generating equipment, transmission lines, and other major property items are concerned, he said.

The demand for electric appliances and better standards of lighting in stores and homes may increase domestic output from 50 to 100 per cent in many localities, Young said. Much of the increase would come from appliances never before in general use, such as electric blankets, ironing machines, and room coolers.

MIDDLE WEST'S PROFITS HIGHER IN NINE MONTHS

Consolidated net income of Middle West corporation in the three and nine months ended Sept. 30 showed little change from profits in the 1944 periods, the big utility holding company reported yesterday.

Net earnings in the September quarter decreased slightly to $990,569 from $1,013,092 a year earlier. Operating revenues in the quarter rose 2.4 per cent to $22,339,569. Nine months' consolidated net income was $2,853,228, against $2,744,445 a year

Operating revenues in the nine months rose 4.8 per cent to $66,123,261.

Net income of the parent company was $475,222, or approximately 14.4 cents a share, in the September quarter, compared with $486,773, or 14.7 cents a share, a year ago. Nine months' profit rose to $2,002,983, or 60.6 cents a share, from $1,186,189, or 35.9 cents a share, a year earlier.

PRICES OF RYE TUMBLE AFTER 3 CENT ADVANCE

December and May rye futures tumbled yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade after an early advance of 2⅛ to 3 cents a bushel. December reached 12⅝ cents above the low on Wednesday, but selling attributed to houses with eastern connections found little support and prices receded 6 to 7¼ cents from the top. The finish was near the bottom at net losses of 2⅜ to 3⅛. July rye gained ⅛ and September was ⅛ lower.

Oats lost ⅜ to 1⅛, wheat was unchanged to ⅜ lower, barley was unchanged to ⅛ higher, and corn was unchanged at ceiling prices.

Spiegel's Sales Exceed 8 Millions in November

Spiegel, Inc., yesterday said consolidated sales in November totaled $8,672,149, bringing volume to $61,763,222 in the first 11 months of 1945. No comparison was available as only mail order sales were reported last year.

TWO INSURANCE FIRMS MAY ASK HOUSING SITES

Consider Investing in Chicago

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Dec. 6—Hopes of Chicago aldermen here in an attempt to interest large insurance companies in building housing developments in Chicago received a boost today when they learned that at least two companies are interested in Chicago as a site for future investments.

John H. Muller, vice president in charge of housing for the Equitable Life Assurance society, said his company is considering at least one and perhaps several $10,000,000 developments for Chicago that will contain 2,000 to 3,000 units which will rent at approximately $15 a month per room.

The Other Company

George S. Van Schaick, vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, told the group that his company is considering entering the housing field and expressed interest in Chicago as the site of at least one project. A definite answer on this was promised the aldermen within a month.

The aldermen, members of a council subcommittee on housing, are Moss [5th], chairman; Pacini [10th], Harvey [2d], Bieszczat [26th], and Hilburn [47th].

A committee from the Equitable company will come to Chicago within a few weeks, Muller said, to confer with Mayor Kelly, the Chicago plan commission, and Patrick F. Sullivan, who heads the Chicago Building Trades council. He said his company would prefer to build on land that is now vacant rather than resort to slum clearance.

Coöperation Is Pledged

Moss promised both Muller and Van Schaick the full coöperation of the city in picking logical sites and acquiring land near suitable transportation. He suggested as possibilities a vacant area east of Cottage Grove av., near 83d st., and several areas which the plan commission has cataloged as blighted and in need of early redevelopment.

In 1944 the Equitable company collected a total of $30,814,990 in premiums in Illinois. It paid out a total of $7,221,870 in claims. The New York Life group collected $23,136,434 and paid out $7,724,305 in the same period.

BUILDING OUTLOOK

BY AL CHASE

Office of price administration restrictions on building operations and threats to the construction industry contained in the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing act of 1945 provide a discouraging outlook for home building, Edward G. Gavin, editor of American Builder, said last night. He spoke at a dinner meeting of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association in the La Salle hotel.

The Wagner bill, now before the senate, will choke the building industry, he said. It throws a sop to every element in the construction business, but is one of the most insidious bits of proposed legislation ever drawn and is planned to wreck private initiative in the building field, he charged.

It will raise taxes in its effort to give tax free housing to millions of voters. It provides for the erection of 500,000 public housing units during the next four years at a cost to the taxpayer of 3 billion 960 million dollars, thus reducing private construction by draining off immense quantities of building materials, he asserted.

"Nobody is going to build rental housing with the present OPA rent ceilings blocking any chance of getting a fair return on the investment," he said.

Newsprint Ceiling Hiked $6, Effective on Dec. 11

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—The OPA today announced an increase of $6 a ton in newsprint ceiling prices. Altho the increase is effective Dec. 11, OPA said the industry generally would not apply it until Jan. 1, because most newsprint is sold on yearly contracts with quarterly adjustments. The higher prices apply to all newsprint sold in this country, including imports.

Stocks Surge to Peak Since Early in 1931

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Demand for steels, motors, aviations, amusements, and specialties today lifted the stock market to a peak for nearly 15 years. Profit selling reduced many gains at the close. Sales totaled 2,290,000 shares.

Buying was based partly on hopes of strike settlements as General Motors and automotive union officials resumed negotiations. Inflation psychology also was a supporting factor in the wake of the government's living cost figures and indications wages and prices would be permitted to expand proportionately.

Eastern Air Lines rose 3¼, Union Pacific 2⅞, and Paramount Pictures 2¼. A weak exception was Great Western Sugar, which dropped 3⅝ points on a cut dividend.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite was up 0.2 at 76.4, a high since April 14, 1931.

BONDS LITTLE CHANGED

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Except for favored rails, bond market prices held close to yesterday's levels. Leaders of the small group moving up included Missouri Pacific general 4s and convertible 5½s, Katy 5s and adjustment 5s, Lackawanna 4s, Seaboard All-Florida 6s, Florida East Coast 5s, American and Foreign Power 5s, Rio Grande Western 4s and 5s, Lehigh Valley 4½s, and International Great Northern 6s.

CHICAGO STOCKS HIGHER

Prices closed higher yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Turnover increased to 65,000 shares with 84 issues advancing and 27 declining. Active gainers included Consolidated Biscuit, up 1⅛ to a 1945 peak of 25¼; Domestic Industries, up ½ at 6⅜, also a new high, and Peabody Coal, up ⅝. Also active were Asbestos Manufacturing, unchanged, and Chicago corporation, unchanged.

Lever Names Luckman as Top Assistant

Charles Luckman, former president of the Pepsodent company, has been appointed to the newly created position of executive vice president of Lever Brothers company, Cambridge, Mass., Francis A. Countway, president, said yesterday.

Charles Luckman

Luckman, 36, becomes second in command of the big company which is controled in Great Britain. Countway is 69. Luckman will take over his new duties Jan. 1, 1946, and will move from Chicago to Boston.

Elected to Institute

Born in Kansas City, Mo., Luckman attended public schools in that city and then moved to Chicago. He enrolled in a course of architecture at the University of Illinois in 1927 and was graduated in 1931. His high rank in the state licensing examinations won him election to the American Institute of Architects.

No work was available for a young architect in the 1931 depression year, so Luckman took a "temporary" job in the advertising department of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet company. Later he went to the sales department where his rise was rapid. He first was assigned to south side sales and later was put in charge of sales of six states.

Advanced with Pepsodent

Luckman became associated with Pepsodent in 1935 as sales manager. The next year he became vice president in charge of sales, and in 1937 was also put in charge of advertising. He was elected vice president and general manager in 1938, then executive vice president. He became president in 1943. Pepsodent company was purchased by Lever Brothers in July, 1944.

JUSTICE OFFICE OPPOSES ALL 4 PULLMAN BIDS

Says Sale to Rails Means Monopoly

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 6 [Special]—The anti-trust division of the department of justice today filed with a special three judge federal expediting court a brief opposing sale of the operating end of the Pullman, Inc., car business to any one of the four bidders.

Holmes Baldridge, special assistant to the United States attorney general, presented the brief to the court. He indicated that the government would contest the decision of Pullman, Inc., to sell the 75 million dollar Pullman company to a group of 43 railroads because, as the brief asserted, it would "merely substitute a new monopoly."

The brief also said this would "eliminate all competition between railroads as to the services and types of facilities of rolling stock and result in discrimination against weaker roads."

Doubts Full Compliance

The government said the railroad group, which uses more than 90 per cent of Pullman company's services, could not fully comply with a court decree of last May 8 which ordered complete separation of the operating and manufacturing branches of Pullman, Inc.

It said that if the railroads acquire the property their representatives would have to sit on the board of directors of the sleeping car company and in doing so would not be complying with the court order there be no relationship between manufacturing and servicing.

The proposal made by Otis & Co., which Pullman, Inc., brushed aside as "little more than a gamble," has several striking advantages, particularly the offer to spend 500 million dollars for new rolling stock, said the brief.

Otis' proposal has two marked weaknesses: [1] the association of Robert R. Young and Allan P. Kirby, officers of Alleghany corporation, which controls the Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, Nickel Plate, and Whe
